CHENG KWOK-YAU'S CONVICTION TO STAND

ARCTIC SEA DISASTER FEARS

S.O.S. MESSAGES FROM HUTCHINSONS

FLYING FAMILY

NO TRACE FOUND BY RESCUE CRAFT

Copenhagen, Sept. 11.

There is grave reason to fear that disaster has overtaken Mr. and Mrs. George Hutchinson and their family in the Arctic Sea.

S.O.S. signals were received from their giant amphibian machine. A powerful British trawler rushed at full speed to the rescue and failed to find any trace of their craft.

The S.O.S. messages were picked up at Angmagssalik towards which the plane was flying. Mr. Hutchinson demanding urgent assistance, announcing that the craft had been compelled to make a forced landing on the sea near the Greenland coast.

The message was also picked up by the British trawler, Port Talbot, which immediately ceased fishing operations and went at full speed to the rescue.

RADIO SUDDENLY CEASES.

Mr. Hutchinson must have realised that the rough seas were dangerous to his craft and maintained wireless contact with the Port Talbot for over an hour, impressing the urgency of the matter.

After an hour, despite all the efforts of the Port Talbot's wireless operator, no answer could be obtained from the Hutchinson machine.

PORT TALBOT'S REPORTS.

The last messages from Angmagssalik consist of reports from the master of the Port Talbot, which arrived this evening at the position given by Mr. Hutchinson and found no trace of the machine.

It was only four hours after the receipt of the first S.O.S. call from the Hutchinson machine that the Port Talbot arrived at the position given, namely, Lat. 65.28 North, Long. 38.45 W.

AMPHIBIAN PLANE.

The machine was an amphibian and there was every hope that she would ride the seas until the arrival of the rescue ship. The Port Talbot is now engaged in scouring the district for miles around in the hope that the craft was forced down elsewhere than Mr. Hutchinson believed himself to be.

The party aboard the missing machine consists of Mr. and Mrs. George Hutchinson, their two daughters, aged eight and six respectively, and a crew of four.

They were attempting to fly from New York to Edinburgh, via Greenland and Iceland. They arrived at Julianashaab safely on September 7, from Godthaab, and took off yesterday for Angmagssalik.

The Hutchinson machine carried an ordinary undercarriage for land flying when she took off from New York but this was detached at Nova Scotia and sent by steamer to Edinburgh for the later stages of the flight.—Reuter.

The Hongkong dollar remains unchanged at 1s. 4 1/8d, despite rises in the silver quotations both in London and New York. The local market is very quiet.

Mr. George Hutchinson who, with his family, is feared lost in the Arctic Sea.

CORKRAN OUTRAGE

NO TRACE OF THE CAPTORS

RANSOM DEMAND STORY UNTRUE

There is no truth whatever in the reports that the bandits who kidnapped Mr. Charles Corkran and Mrs. Pawley near Newchwang have demanded the payment of $250,000 as ransom.

The local naval authorities have received a wireless message from H.M.S. Sandwich, relaying information from the British Consul at Newchwang declaring that no ransom has yet been asked for as contact has not yet been established with the captors of Mr. Corkran and Mrs. Pawley.

DIPLOMATIC PRESSURE.

"It is urgently desired," the message proceeds, "that this erroneous report should be suppressed as it is likely to lead to a relaxation of efforts to trace the captors and establish contact, and similarly, a relaxation of public interest and such diplomatic pressure as may ultimately be required to achieve success in securing their release."

The present whereabouts of the missing Britons are unknown.

GERMAN FLIER COMING

DUE IN HONGKONG ON WORLD FLIGHT

Captain Wolfgang von Gronau, the noted German flier, is expected in Hongkong about the 22nd inst. on his world flight.

Leaving the Kasumi Gaura naval base about September 17 in their big Dornier Wal flying boat, Von Gronau and his three companions are scheduled to visit Nagoya, Kagothima, Shanghai and Hongkong before reaching Manila on the 25th on their way back to Germany.

From the Philippines, the four, who arrived at Tokyo recently after a swift flight across the Pacific from Canada, are to proceed via the Dutch East Indies and India.

Though the Hongkong-Manila flight of about 650 miles is considered dangerous for a land plane of low power such as that in which Fernando Rein, young Spanish airman, flew to Apari, it offers few terrors to such a craft as the Von Gronau ship.

DEATH SENTENCE ON WEDNESDAY

FULL COURT AGAINST DEFENCE PLEAS

LEAVE TO APPEAL TO BE SOUGHT

SENTENCE OF DEATH WILL BE PASSED UPON CHENG KWOK-YAU ON WEDNESDAY MORNING NEXT, THE FULL COURT TO-DAY ANNOUNCING A DECISION UPHOLDING HIS CONVICTION FOR PROCURING THE MURDER OF GEORGE FUNG, ALIENATOR OF THE AFFECTIONS OF LAI MING-FAY, HIS FIANCE.

The judgment centred upon the admissibility of the evidence of Edward Zimmern and Christie and both judges upheld the decision of the Chief Justice at the Criminal Sessions.

Crowds thronged the court-room and corridors, but Cheng Kwok-yau was not present to hear the decision.

Mr. R. C. H. Lim, counsel for the defence, in the absence of Mr. Eldon Potter and Mr. F. C. Jenkin, announced that application would be made for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

ZIMMERN-CHRISTIE EVIDENCE

The main judgment was delivered by the Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice Wood. In the course of a lengthy review of the legal position, he held that the evidence of Zimmern and Christie was rightly received. The objection taken by the defence cannot be sustained.

"Evidence has to be received not merely in accordance with a standard of its appropriateness to prove a conclusion for which the prosecution contends; but also because whatever its appropriateness in the adjudication, it in fact belongs to the story to which the attention of the court is drawn."

TWO ISSUES.

Later he said: "In his summing-up the learned Chief Justice distinguished to the jury at the outset the issues, the fact of the incitement of Lau and the identity of his fiacer."

"That the case was properly left to the jury on sufficient evidence is to my mind abundantly clear. The duty of the trial judge is to see to it that the verdict of the jury is given after proper instruction in their functions, not in the field of supposition and conjecture but of facts and inference. He may recognise that the jury have before them a choice of alternative inferences all of which may be reasonable and he must explain to them the principles of selection which should guide them but he must not constitute himself a judge of fact in their place."

"The verdict must in my view be allowed to stand."

CHIEF JUSTICE CONCURS.

The Chief Justice, concurring, said:

"I agree generally with the judgment which has just been delivered by my learned brother. I should like to add another reason why, in my opinion, the evidence objected to is admissible. Perhaps this additional reason is only re-statement, from a different point of view, of the reasons already given."

Whether one fact tends to prove another is, speaking broadly, a matter of common mental processes. As it is put in Halsbury's Law of England, Vol. 1, p. 101, 'the fact that a man is a Jew tends to prove that he is a Jew'.

LEGAL EVIDENCE.

Some matters which ordinary reasoning would admit are definitely excluded by the rules of legal evidence for various sound reasons e.g. involuntary confessions because of the great risk that they may not be true, bad character because of its dangerously prejudicial nature and small value towards proving the single acts alleged, and hearsay because it is not on oath, cannot be tested by cross-examination, opens a door to fraud, is less reliable by reason of its being second-hand and would tend to protract legal inquiries and to encourage the substitution of weaker for stronger evidence.

INTELLIGENT REASONING.

I think however, that if ordinary intelligent reasoning would accept a fact as probative of the main fact alleged, as it undoubtedly would accept the evidence objected to in the present case, some such definite rule of legal exclusion must be found applicable before it can be shut out.

I think that no such rule is applicable here. There were facts that evidence disclosed another offence does not alone, exclude it. Here the evidence was not offered to show that the accused was of a murderous disposition generally and likely to commit another murder, and it did not in any way tend to suggest that he was.

CLEARLY ADMISSIBLE.

It was offered simply in order to prove that he was the person who employed Lau to procure the murder and in my opinion it was clearly admissible for that purpose.

I think that the conviction should be affirmed.

LEAVE TO APPEAL.

Mr. Lim:—In view of the fact that we shall be applying for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council, it would help us greatly if your Lordships would note this case as one of general and public importance.

Mr. Lim cited one authority to support his request.

The Chief Justice refused the application, adding: "The prisoner will be brought up for sentence on Wednesday."

The threatened Communist rising in Spain did not materialise yesterday, the police having been amply forewarned and able to unearth numerous armories. The revolt was alleged to have been planned following the failure of the Government to impose the death sentence on General Sanjurjo (above), leader of the Seville revolt. Picture on right shows a gendarme near a heap of confiscated arms.

INTERPORT BOWLS

H.K. TEAM'S GOOD IMPRESSION

PRACTICE GAMES YESTERDAY

(Our Own Correspondent).

Shanghai, Sept. 12. The Hongkong interport lawn bowls team arrived yesterday afternoon, being met by the President and members of the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Association and taken to the Palace Hotel.

Later in the afternoon, the Hongkong bowlers paid a visit to the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Club, where they indulged in a practice roll-up.

Two rinks were formed for the practice game, and although the greens were in a very heavy state, it was seen that the Hongkong team is a very strong combination. The opinion is, indeed, expressed here that the visiting team is the strongest ever to have been sent to Shanghai.

To-day, the Hongkong players will meet the Lusitano Club in a rink game at Hongkew Park, at 3 p.m. They will later be entertained to dinner at the Lusitano Club.

MANILA SHIP WRECKED

ALL ON BOARD SAFE ASHORE

Manila, Sept. 9.

The interisland steamer Misamis, of L. Everett and Company, was wrecked on a rock off Calavite Point, north Mindoro, last night, according to a radio message intercepted by the Bureau of Posts and telegraphed to the Manila office. The message was sent by H. D. Cranston, local business man who was a passenger on the Misamis bound for Cullion, and read as follows:

"Misamis total wreck and abandoned in rock Calavite Point, north Mindoro. Everybody safe but short of food and water. Notify owners and send help immediately. Passengers safe on shore. Sydney Maru taking me to Zamboanga. Notify office and Cullion office."

The Misamis left Manila at 6 p.m., last Wednesday for Coron, Cullion, Cuyo and Puerto Princesa with passengers and cargo. She was owned by Carlos Palanca and was operated by L. Everett and Co.

BATTLE OF MARNE

FRENCH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

"REMEMBER"

(Special to "Telegraph").

Paris, Sept. 11. France is to-day celebrating the eighteenth anniversary of the Battle of the Marne and the one word "Remember" is the keynote of French feeling.

It was inspired by a speech delivered at the unveiling of the Varennes War Memorial, which was presented to France by Americans, M. Herriot performing the ceremony.

Observing that France had frequently been accused of late of being warlike, M. Herriot claimed that a heartfelt desire for peace had inspired all her actions.

FORCE INSTINCTS.

France, he said, had been careful not to awaken by imprudent demonstrations those instincts towards the employment of force which could not be controlled once they had been let loose.

He expressed the gratitude of France to American statesmen who were "endeavouring" to establish by reason "that order which had been disturbed by violence."

He emphasised, in particular, the value of the Hoover proposals for the reduction of armaments.—Reuter.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

In order to better explain the following hand to you, I have given both East and West the king of spades. There are several principles of play involved in the hand.

♠ J-9-7-4	♠ (K)-8-5-2
♥ 9-3	♥ J-8-5
♦ J-5-2	♦ A-8-4
♣ K-J-7-5	♣ Q-9-8-6
♠ (K)-3-2	♠ (K)-8-5-2
♥ 10-7-6-4-2	♥ J-8-5
♦ K-Q-9-6-3	♦ A-8-4
♣ 4	♣ Q-9-8-6
♠ A-Q-10-6	♠ (K)-8-5-2
♥ A-K-Q	♥ J-8-5
♦ 10-7	♦ A-8-4
♣ A-10-3-2	♣ Q-9-8-6

The Bidding.

The contract bidding, employing the one over one, would be South one spade, West pass, North two spades—a very weak hand, but with four trump and a doubleton, you should give partner a chance. East would pass and South, with his big hand, should now jump to four spades.

The Play.

West's opening lead would be the king of diamonds. East should play the eight showing his partner the ace. The first play—supposing that West continues with the queen of diamonds and then a small diamond.

When East plays the ace, the declarer must be careful not to make the mistake of trumping with the six of spades—he must trump with the queen and now lead a small club, winning in dummy with the king. He should now play the nine of spades from dummy. East, if he has the king, should not cover, and now the declarer has the six spot to play on dummy's lead.

If East held three spades to the king, that is the only way that the declarer can pick up the king, while West happened to hold the king. West would now win the trick and would then become an entry for the declarer in dummy.

Suppose, however, that after holding the first trick with the king of diamonds, West were to shift to his singleton club. The declarer should play small from dummy. East would not go up with the queen but would play his eight spot.

The declarer would win with the ten. That lead of the four of clubs warns him that there is a singleton club out and now, regardless of the location of the king of spades, the declarer must not take any finesse, but should immediately play his ace of spades and then lead the queen of spades.

Regardless of who holds the king—East or West—they are not going to be able to get in a club ruff. Of course, if West should happen to hold three spades to the king, when he shifted to the singleton club, there would be no way for the declarer to make his contract, but that would be the only holding that would prevent declarer from going game.

A Good Plan!

Paul Gorguloff, the Russian political fanatic who assassinated President Doumer, was gesticulating wildly and demanding the death sentence in a ranting speech to the court, when this picture was taken at the trial. Meanwhile his bearded attorney, Henri, Geraud, made a gesture showing he realized the futility of trying to defend his client.

The wife of Paul Gorguloff a pathetic figure as she pleaded for mercy to be shown her husband, out of consideration for their unborn child.

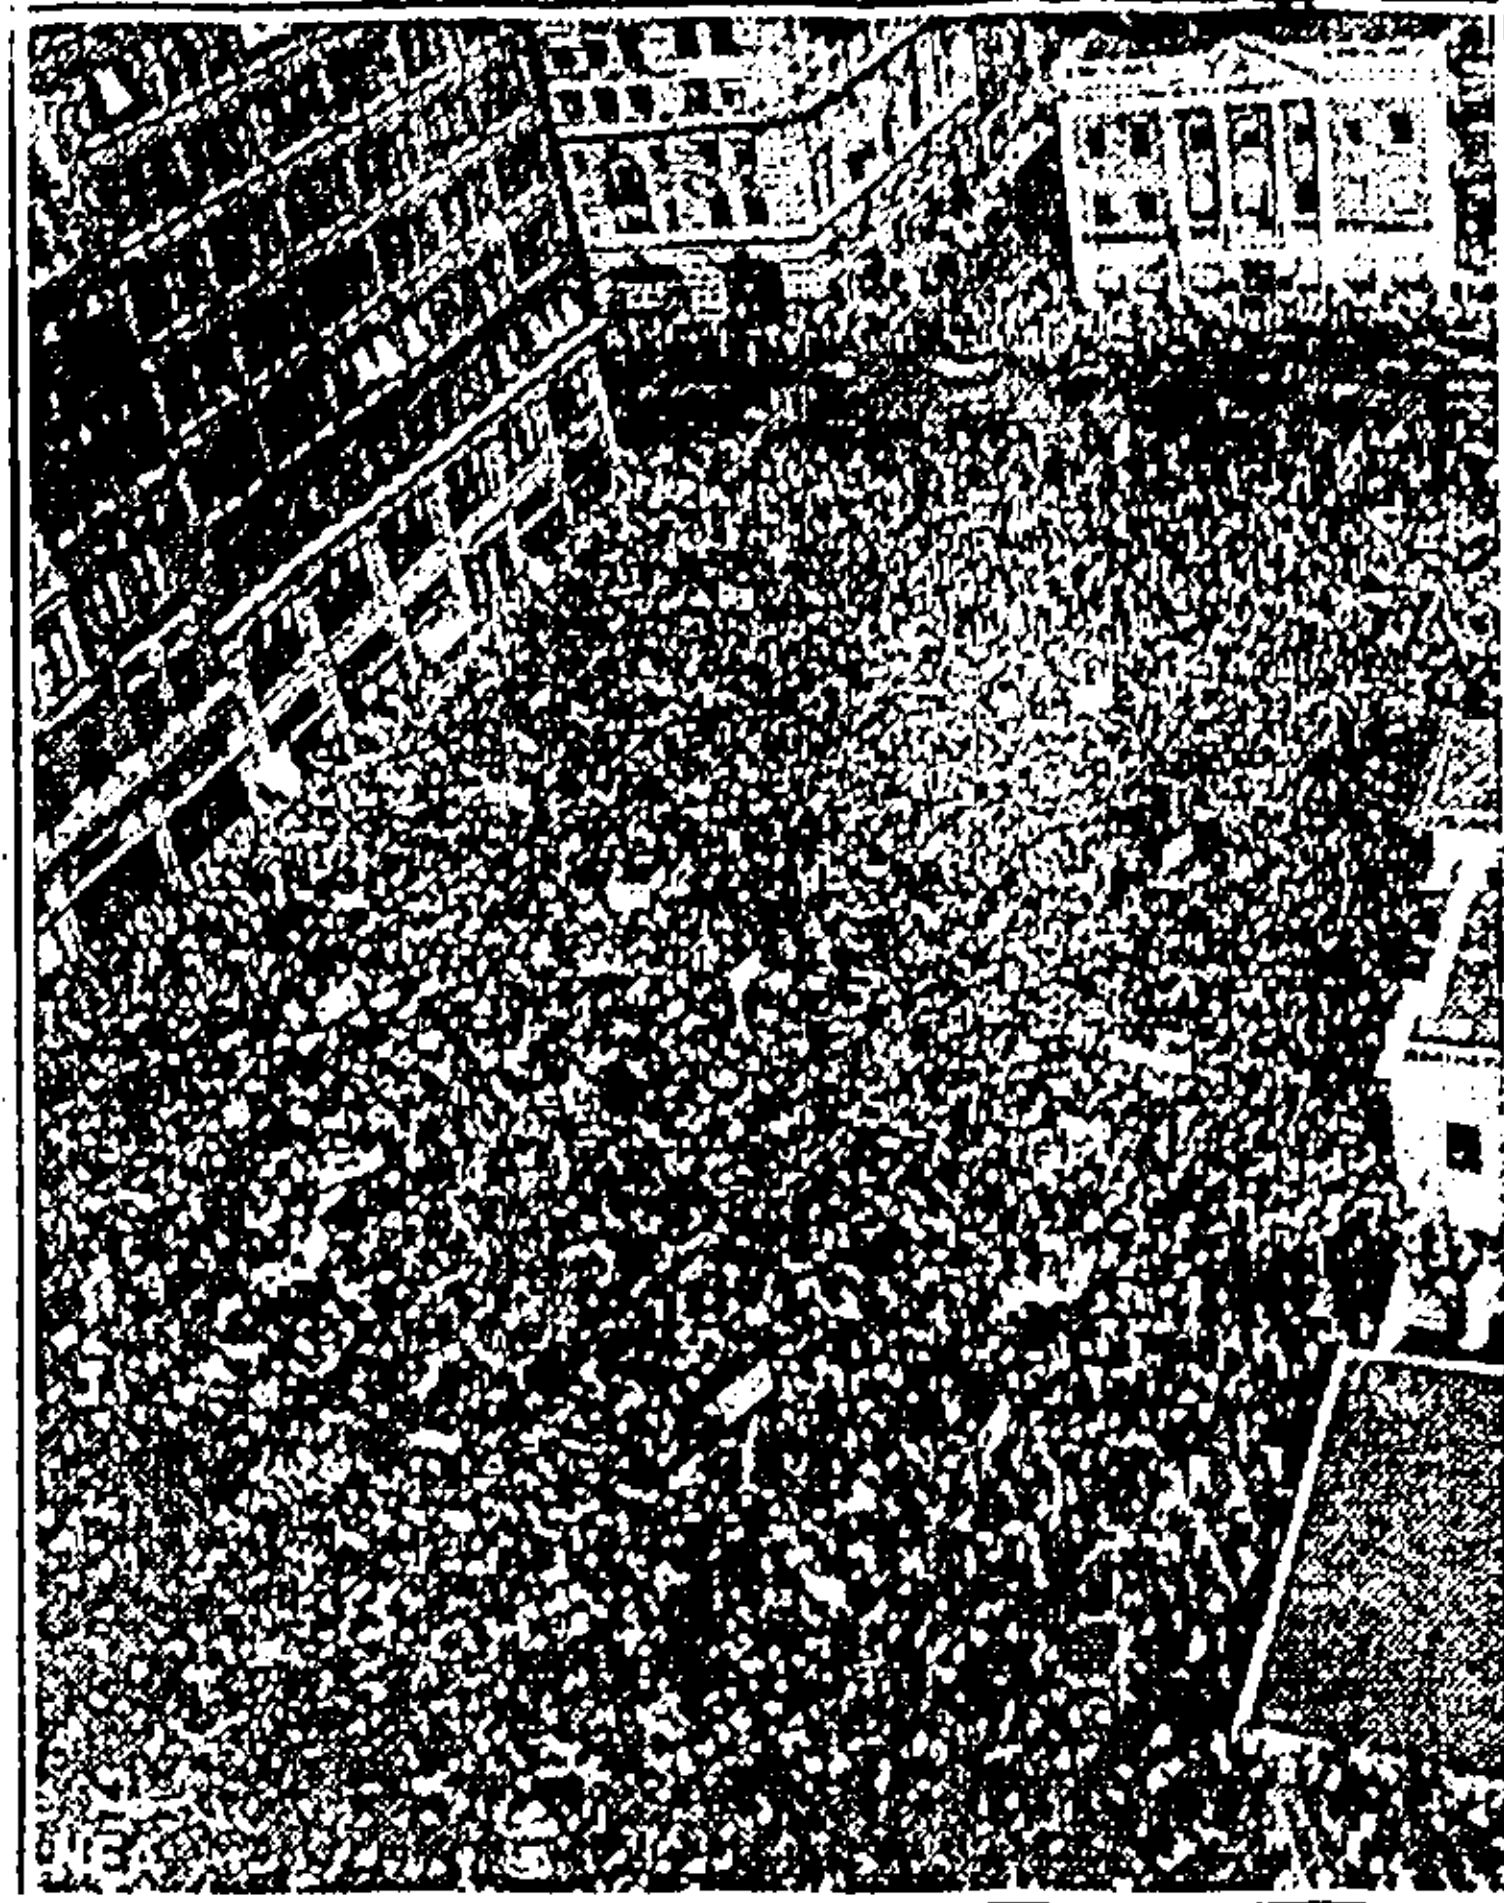

Only when his grief-stricken wife pleaded for his life did Paul Gorguloff seem touched by remorse. Here you see how the assassin sat with a hand to his bowed head.

The Russian merchant marine has his "goblet," and also his "goblet." Women are allowed to serve as ordinary seamen, and are expected to qualify as third officers after two years at sea. One of the girl sailors here is shown lowering a ladder from a Soviet motor ship anchored in the Thames.

Photo shows what the well-dressed Buddhist priest will wear while conducting missionary work in the Occident. The robes are bright orange, and decorated according to the mode of centuries. The socks are garterless, the sandals cool. The priests themselves are Ananda, left, and Rahula, now in London to convert westerners to the teachings of Buddha.

Communists called it an "International Day of Struggle Against Imperialistic War." But the mass meeting shown above, in Union Square, New York, turned into a protest demonstration against the use of troops in expelling the bonus marchers from Washington.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

Cherry Dixon, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan and then, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her. They are married and move into a cheap apartment. Cherry's struggles with housework are discouraging. Dixie Shannon, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome Max Pearson, also of the News.

After several weeks Cherry's mother becomes seriously ill. The girl is called home and there is a reconciliation with her parents but pride will not allow her to accept financial aid from them. When Mrs. Dixon is stronger she and her husband leave for several months at the seashore.

Cherry and Dan are invited to a swimming party at a nearby resort. Dan is dozing and Cherry starts with Pearson. A storm overtakes them and while they are waiting for it to pass he tells her he loves her. They finally reach home but after that Cherry avoids Pearson.

Brenda Vail, magazine writer, comes to Wellington. Dan meets her and she asks him to collaborate with her on a play. Dan spends most of his evenings at Miss Vail's apartment. He and Cherry plan an evening together but a telephone call comes for Dan from Miss Vail.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Dan put down the telephone. "I'm sorry," he said. "Guess we'll have to see the Casseys some other night. That was Brenda calling. She's just had a new idea for the ending of the first act. Wants me to come over and rewrite what we did last night."

"Couldn't it wait until tomorrow?"

"Why, Cherry, I can't very well ask Brenda to wait. It's a big opportunity for me, you know. It's not every author who'd be willing to collaborate with a person entirely unknown. If she wants to work on the play tonight I think it's up to me to be there."

"I suppose you're right," Cherry said slowly. "You'll have to go."

Dan disappeared into the dressing room. A few minutes later he was back, pulling the ends of his tie through to make a neat knot. "Listen, Cherry," he said, "why don't you come along with me?"

"You mean go with you to Miss Vail's?"

"Sure. Maybe we'll be through early and we can pick up somebody at the office for a game of bridge. Or we might see a late movie."

Cherry shook her head. "No, I guess I'll stay at home."

"But why don't you come? You said you'd been in the house all day. It would be good for you to get out."

Cherry was not to be persuaded. "You go," she said. "If Dan that she had been horribly bored. She managed without she finally took the folds of yellow cloth over her arm and went upstairs to rap on the door of the Moreaus' apartment. Why should she feel jealous of Brenda Vail, this woman who was almost a stranger? What did it matter to Cherry if Dan spent so many evenings with Miss Vail? They were writing a play—the play that was to make Dan known to the world as a talented young author.

"I should be grateful," Cherry told herself. "She's doing what I can't for Dan—helping him make a name and a place for himself. It means everything for me, too. Money. The sort of life we've dreamed of. Happiness! Dan could never be happy with things as they are now. He's too ambitious. Oh, I should be glad Miss Vail came to Wellington and glad she's staying!"

Somehow, although she told herself all this several times, she could not quite believe it. Not a single thing had happened to plant in Cherry's mind the seed of jealousy and yet the restless, trouble-some thing was there.

Dan did not come home early that evening or the next. He told Cherry enthusiastically that at last the play was progressing. Two acts were almost completed. The third, which was to be the last act, was going to be difficult to handle. There was so much about the mechanics of writing for the stage of which he was ignorant. Brenda seemed to know, though. If the play really "clicked" the credit would be Brenda's.

"She's great!" he assured Cherry with glowing eyes. "Brenda knows life. She's as different from the sort of people you meet around here as day is from night."

It was on such occasions that the green-eyed goddess asserted itself. Cherry would remain silent to keep the bitter thoughts from her lips. Dan did not seem to notice how much of the time Cherry was silent.

There were evenings Dan did not spend working with Brenda. Occasionally Miss Vail had other engagements. Once some friends came for her and drove her to a town 50 miles away. She spent two days there, returning to tell Dan that she had been horribly bored. She managed without

There were other evenings when Dan had assignments or was busy at the office. He telephoned to Cherry on a night when he had been working late. It was almost 9 o'clock.

"Listen, honey," he said. "Max and I are going to stop for you in 15 minutes. Can you be ready? It's a grand night and we're going to drive out to a new barbecue place on Stewart road. Better have a coat—it's cool out. Yes, we'll be there in 15 minutes. Twenty at the latest!"

The 20 minutes were not yet up when the roadster halted before the apartment house. Cherry came down the steps wearing a knitted sweater suit. It was brown and pulled close over her head was a scarlet beret. She looked unusually childish, unusually attractive.

Cherry called "Hello!" gayly and stepped into the roadster. She had not seen Max Pearson since the night of their drive through the storm.

His greeting was friendly, casual. Dan wanted to know if Cherry was sure she would be warm enough and she said that she was. A moment more and they were off down the street.

The week had brought the first foretaste of autumn weather. There was a sharp nip in the air and once as they neared the limits of the city the odor of burning grass came to them. It must have been the first fall bonfire. Overhead the sky was almost black and the stars gleamed with chill, bright frigidities.

Cherry felt Dan's arm around her and snuggled close. She was glad that she had worn the woolly sweater suit. The cold wind struck against her cheeks and sent her blood back tingling. It was good to be riding through the night. It was good to have Dan at her side. Suddenly in the darkness Cherry's worries and problems slipped away.

Her fingers found Dan's hand, slipped into it. He was saying something she could not hear because of the wind. Cherry laughed and turned her head.

Dan repeated, "I said we hadn't driven out on this road since June. Remember? Max brought us that night, too."

Cherry nodded. The memory of that spring night was still sweet. All the happiness she had known with Dan suddenly came crowding back. Oh, how could she have thought for one moment that anything could affect her love for Dan or his for her? Of course it was nonsense! She had been making herself unhappy over nothing. Nothing was wrong and nothing would ever take Dan away from her.

did not even listen or hear Dan's reply. She was glad the conversation was about something at the office about which they would not expect her to express an opinion.

They were riding along a well-lighted highway. Presently, far ahead, an electric sign loomed up.

"That's the place," Pearson told them. "Jo and I were out last week. Elegant fried chicken they serve. That is if you're in the mood for fried chicken—which I certainly am!"

"Chill for mine," Dan announced. "Haven't had a good bowl of hot chili for ages."

"Why do they call it a barbecue?" Cherry wanted to know. "It looks just like any other place to eat."

They had reached the lighted building. A dozen cars were parked by the road and there were more in an enclosed space at the other side of the structure. Pearson brought the roadster to a halt and the three stepped to the ground.

"There's a theory," Max explained, "that these places actually barbecue their meat—cook it whole, you know, over a bed of coals. As a matter of fact I think their kitchens are just about like any other restaurant's. You get good food and not much service—which suits most folks when they're driving."

They entered the long low building. Three men in white caps and aprons were serving customers who sat on high, swivel stools or lounged against the counter. There were two girls with escorts at one end of the room. The other customers were men.

One of the men behind the counter was making sandwiches. Another was filling cups of coffee for a tray that was evidently to be carried to customers waiting outside in a car.

Cherry and Dan and Max found places at the counter. They gave their orders and were served almost immediately. The hot coffee was strong and delicious, the chicken delicately tender. Though the portions were huge Cherry finished every crumb.

The talk drifted to Dan's play. "Putting a lot of time on it, I suppose," Pearson asked easily. "Every minute I can spare. You know I had no idea there was so much work to a play. It's not just writing the lines but thinking the thing through and planning how it's to go."

"How about the collaboration?" Pearson wanted to know. "Do you both write and put your work together or how do you manage?"

GOLD AND STERLING

The question of whether, and if so, when, Britain should return to the gold standard is still forming the subject of controversy at Home, but the general impression appears to be that no decision ought to be taken at present about the future value of sterling in terms either of gold or dollars. This is based on the point that no-one yet knows, and cannot know, what the future value of either gold or dollars in terms of goods is likely to be. One authority thinks that Britain can reasonably seek to manage the American exchange so as to prevent unnecessary short-term fluctuations and work in with the American authorities in bringing "reflation" about, holding that such a policy will be mutually beneficial. But he feels that no long-term decisions about the value of sterling should be made for some time to come.

There is every possibility that in the course of Britain's experiments in short-term currency management a method will be hit upon which will make permanently unnecessary any return to the gold standard in the old sense. In the past, the strongest part of the case in favour of the gold standard was based on the argument that, in the interests of trade, the relative values of national currencies ought to be nearly enough known in advance to enable buyers and sellers of goods across national frontiers to make reliable estimates of their receipts in relation to their costs of production. This need, however, could be met sufficiently for most purposes if the short-term fluctuations of the exchanges could be kept within narrow limits, as they were under the gold standard. A similar policy of short-term stabilisation of the exchanges, combined with the power to vary them in accordance with changes in long-term forces, could be pursued—as it will presumably be pursued now with the aid of the Exchange Equalisation Fund—without returning to the gold standard at all. One economist thinks the path of wisdom for Britain to-day is to encourage and develop the tendency towards the creation of a "sterling area" of countries which aim at keeping their national currencies stable in terms of sterling instead of gold. In this case, too, what matters in the interests of trade is far more short-term than long-term stability of the exchanges, and there is no reason why they should not keep the power to make long-term adjustments in the sterling value of their currencies, while pegging the exchanges over short periods by the familiar method of holding sterling balances in London, just as Britain now holds dollar balances in New York. It is true that long-term stability matters in respect of international debts; but existing long-term debts will clearly have to be readjusted, and new debt arrangements could be made to fit in with the new conditions.

The "sterling area" thus envisaged would include as many Empire countries as are prepared to come in, but would be open equally to other countries, such as the Scandinavians, the South Americans, or some of them, and perhaps the countries of Central Europe which are now on the verge of currency depreciation. Such a "sterling area" would not be a purely British concern. It would become the concern of all the countries included within the group, and some form of consultation between the monetary authorities of these countries would have to be devised—perhaps, as the forerunner of the long-awaited international authority for managing the monetary affairs of the whole world.

The Split in the Labour Party

The breach between the Independent Labour Party and the official Labour Party was long in coming—so long, in fact, that the final plunge was little more than a formality. The two wings of the party have been at variance for years. Outward unity has by no means concealed the inward disorder. Both sections will breathe more freely now that neither has to maintain appearances. In the past, the I.L.P. provided the driving force of the Labour movement. Its ranks were mainly recruited from the intellectuals to whom Socialism appealed as an attractive philosophy. The other, or Trade Union wing, consisted of those whose socialistic theories were strongly tinged with the practical determination to raise the standard of living of the industrial worker. While the Labour movement was still in its teens the two sections worked together fairly comfortably in double harness. Indeed they made such remarkable progress that by 1924 they actually found themselves in office. From that time, however, dates a steady trickle away from doctrinaire to, and even beyond, the orthodox Labour tenets. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Viscount Snowden, for instance, both started their political careers in the I. L. P. They are now as much to the right of the main body as they were formerly to the left. Other one-time leaders of the I.L.P., like Mr. J. R. Clynes, the former Home Secretary, are now pillars of Labour orthodoxy. The latest decision has pushed others in the same direction, notably Mr. E. F. Wise, the English economic adviser of the Soviet Co-operative Societies. The I. L. P. group, after the minority which refuses to cut adrift from the Labour Party has gone, is neither very large nor very influential. It includes a few well-known parliamentarians like Mr. James Maxton and Mr. Frederick W. Jovett; Commissioner of Works in the first Labour Government. But they have at most 20,000 enrolled supporters—a mere fraction of their erstwhile comrades on the right, and actually fewer perhaps than the Communists on their left. It is indeed difficult to see how the tattered remnant of the I. L. P. is going to maintain an independent position between its two neighbours. The left cannot fail to attract the hares and the right the tortoises. The disagreement over leadership seems to

CORRESPONDENCE.

Scrap Brass.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—Some days ago, you reported the case of a hawk's being fined for having purchased scrap brass at a figure much below market price. In an age that accepts buy-in-the-cheapest-market as an economic principle, it seems to me that a higher standard of morality was expected for this hawk than that to which most of us conform.

I have myself heard an Inspector of Police say, after securing, through haggling, an article in "Paddy's Market" at a ridiculously cheap price, "Of course, the blighter must have stolen it to sell it so cheaply," though I did not notice that he was too keen on prosecuting. But then, it wasn't scrap brass.—Yours, etc., SAUCE FOR THE GANDER.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

SITUATION ON THE FIRST OF THE MONTH

The total storage of water in the Colony's reservoirs on September 1, according to figures supplied by the water Authority, was 2,976,666 million gallons, as compared with 2,789,733 million gallons on the corresponding day and month of last year.

Of this total 2,289,411 m.g. were in the Island reservoirs and 687,255 m.g. in those of Kowloon as compared with 2,102,48 m.g. in the Island and 687,25 in Kowloon on September 1 last year.

The consumption of water on the Island for the month was 396,95 m.g. for an estimated population of 383,750 giving a consumption per head per day of 33.4 gallons as compared with consumption of 390,760 or a consumption per head per day of 33.8 gallons.

In Kowloon.

The consumption in Kowloon was 191,19 m.g. for an estimated population of 303,400 giving a consumption per head per day of 20.3 as compared with a consumption in August 1931 of 160,46 for an estimated population of 289,600 giving a consumption per head per day of 20.1 gallons.

The rainfall of the Colony since January 1 is given as 82.83 inches as compared with 60.71 inches in 1931.

All the Colony's reservoirs except Pokfulam and Lower Aberdeen are level with overflow.

Indicate that the process has already begun. Meanwhile, it seems obvious that the main body of Labour will be strengthened by the disappearance of an unfriendly ally who was really more troublesome than an avowed enemy.

WHAT DO YOU BELIEVE?

By A CITY MINISTER

I THINK it is undoubted that people are asking—especially thoughtful young people—that the Church should restate in clear and definite fashion what its creed is, and what intellectual and moral demands it makes upon those who join its fellowship.

This statement of creed, it is said, should be given in clear, simple, untechnical and unequivocal terms—in other words, the Church's creed should be both simplified and modernised. The question is—Can this be done with gain or, at least, without serious loss?

One must remember, of course, that there is such a thing as a "false simplicity." No one, for instance, can make Einstein's Theory of Relativity either simple or easy. In the same way, no one can make a doctrine of the Atonement or a theory of the Divine Providence a mere matter for babes. In the last resort, anyone joining the Church is expected to think as well as believe! To talk of making abstract thinking about God, the universe, and the human soul either "simple" or "easy" is merely nonsense. In other words, one cannot simplify big things beyond a certain point without altering their quality.

Further, I hope that this modern cry for a simplified creed does not spring from any foolish objection to a creed as such. A creed is only arranged, ordered, and codified thinking. If we have any thinking at all, we must define and delimit it. Some people seem to rear up against creeds in religion while they demand them imperiously everywhere else—say, in politics, philosophy, economics, and ethics. A politician, for instance, would not have a dog's chance with his constituency unless he had a detailed programme, or what we call "a platform." But what is a creed except the Church's programme and platform? A Church without a definite creed of some kind would not be an organism, but only a kind of chaos!

The Need for Change.

With this said, I agree that a modernised and simplified creed is fully justified. The present creeds of the Church represent the mental thinking of the fourth or fifth centuries—and this is the twentieth. Besides, in any case, a creed ought to be fluid, if the promise of the Holy Spirit is true that He will lead us into all truth. The argument for change or revision may be briefly summarised as follows:—

1. Our present creeds are diverse and even contradictory in their definitions and statements.
2. They are antiquated in form and expression as well as in thought.
3. They are naturally coloured by the philosophical terms and ideas of their own day, now largely discarded.
4. They are too long, too defined, and generally too controversial.
5. They were designed, unfortunately, not to make a simple statement to include and excommunicate doubtful people. Indeed, the saddest thing in Church history is that our creeds and confessions were evolved in some desperate crisis of contention as much to exclude and denounce antagonists as to include all the faithful who owed a sincere loyalty to Jesus.

Most ministers of my acquaintance would gladly welcome a short, modern, comprehensive statement of Christian belief—one that would include the "essentials" of the faith and yet would grant all needed latitude for legitimate and natural differences of thinking. They believe that the finest unity is not "uniformity" but unity in variety, unity with difference. The only question is—What are the essentials?

Back to Apostolic Simplicity.

In the early apostolic days, a very simple test or creed was demanded from those who joined the Christian fellowship. That creed is reflected in various passages in the New Testament. It ran something like this:—"Do you own Jesus as Lord?" Only in later days, with the rise of various heresies and the impact of pagan philosophy, was this simple formula defined, amplified, and theologised.

Personally, I should have no hesitation in going back to that simple creed. Christ's only test to Peter was, "Lovest thou Me?" Jesus did not ask a disciple to have fixed and precise notions about Him before He asked the man to follow Him. Some people may reply that such a simple test would leave too much room for radical and crucial differences within the communion. But I submit two things:—

1. That there ought to be room for the exercise of Christian intelligence on all intellectual concerns where difference is natural.

2. If a man loves Jesus, follows Him, and owns Him as Lord, I have no business to say that he has no part in Him, even if he does not regard Jesus exactly as I do.

It is true that our Lord asked, "Whom say ye that I am?" But He did not make the answer to that question a test of orthodoxy. Discipleship with Jesus was rather a kind of spiritual life than a kind of intellectual uniformity!

THIS DIVORCE RACKET

By Edward Kelly, Private Detective.
WE are here to tell the world that when there's any divorcing to be done in Hongkong, we are right on the spot to do it.

We know all there is to know about the fallability of human beings. We had seven wives in Queensland—all barmaids—and there is nothing we don't know about divorce.

We know all about this matrimonial jurisdiction, too. Our last wife was one of those indulgent kind, who let us do exactly as she wished. We didn't know what happiness was until we were married. Then it was too late.

When we were divorced from our last wife, we swore off wives ever since.

We remember when we were divorced. We watched our wife and her co-re for over an hour. We remember it quite well. At 11.27 p.m.—Never mind.

We have many friends who are married, but not seriously. Work this out:—A lady of means went three times around the world looking for her ideal man. One day she met him in Hongkong. He was a friend of ours, and his name was Bill Yous. Now she's Mrs. Bill Yous.

Work out, to the nearest decimal, what chance Mr. Bill Yous had.

"Yeah, she's O.K.—but I'm still partial to that gal just out of St. Louis."

THE BOOKSHELF

USEFUL WORK FOR THE FOREIGN STUDENT

"England and the English," by C. E. Eckersley, M.A. (Longmans, Green and Co., London; 3s. 6d.) should make a wide appeal to the foreign student, for which it is especially produced. The author, who is English Master at the Polytechnic Secondary School and Lecturer in English at the School of Modern Languages, Polytechnic, London, says, in his preface, that one of the difficulties encountered in the course of several years of teaching English to foreign students has been that of finding suitable material for reading. Essays, novels and anthologies have much to commend them, but he has found none of them wholly satisfactory.

This book has been prepared to meet a need which Mr. Eckersley feels has not hitherto been filled. The material in it is varied in style, prose and poetry being included; and its tone ranges from the sombre dignity of Hardy to the gay flippancy of "Evee"; from the lyric beauty of John Galsworthy to the gentle irony of Goldsmith; from the polished periods of Macaulay to the modern colloquialism of F. W. Thomas. The main object has been to reveal England and its people, their lives, both now and in the past, their interests and their character. The Englishman is shown at work and at sport, at school and at sea, celebrating Christmas, motoring, flying, cracking jokes, or meditating on life and death.

In the collation of material, the author has shown a fine sense of balance, and the result is a book of consuming interest. The value of the volume is enhanced by exercises based on the texts of the extracts, the aim in this connection being to attack those difficulties which particularly beset the foreign student. Altogether an admirable work, to be widely commended.

"A POET'S TRAGEDY."

"A Poet's Tragedy," by A. Hemming-Sjoberg (George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., London; 8s. 6d.) gives the life story of C. J. L. Almqvist, the most peculiar, and at the same time the most tragic personality in Swedish literature. This is the first English edition of the Swedish original, "Rättangen mot C. J. L. Almqvist," the work being translated with admirable care by E. Classen.

The volume deals with the tragedy which closed the career of the famous Swedish author, who, in 1851, was accused of theft, forgery, and attempted murder by poisoning, but who succeeded in escaping to America. Written by a trained jurist, the book is an analysis of all the circumstances of the case, in which the author seeks to establish the guilt of Almqvist, which has hitherto been questioned.

Readers will find the work of engrossing interest, and, apart from the criminological point of view, will become deeply interested in this incisive study into a man of truly remarkable character. It is a very human document, packed full of interest.

LIGHT FICTION.

There are some attractive additions to the latest issues of Messrs. Ward, Lock and Company's Colonial Library series of light fiction, amongst which a high place must be given to C. J. Cutcliffe Hyne's "West Highland Spirits." This is a group of short stories, interconnected by the characters which run through the whole volume. They are set in the islands of Benluga, Ull and Foll in the Western Hebrides, where we are introduced to that stately and extremely practical Cleopatra, Isa Mackintosh; General Perkins, the Liverpool stockbroker, his brother, Bill, the Bishop; Captain Xenophon Chalmers, of the s.s. Bride of Donvan (183 tons); and numerous other residents and callers. There is a background of fishing, farming, peat smoke and illicit whisky; and permeating the whole is the sardonic humour of the author, who, if not over-complimentary to the West Highlander, certainly has the knack of telling a good story and investing it with real atmosphere. A book not to be missed by those who like good characterisation in light literature.

Carlton Dawe is extremely good in "Fifteen Keys," another of the Colonial Library series. This is an addition to the "Leathermouth" tales, the title in reality hiding the identity of an international rogue, who is concerned in the kidnapping of a little boy. We are shown Leathermouth, the famous Secret Service man, on one of his most thrilling chases, the more so since the missing boy is his nephew. Finely written, and full of thrills.

"Upstairs, Downstairs, and—" is an intensely engrossing study of a girl of strange mentality. The work of A.R. and R.K. Weekes, and included in Ward, Lock's Colonial Library series, it has to be to do with the story of a girl named one of the New Poor, who takes the place of a paragon, and whose individuality plays strange havoc in the household. The characterisation is excellent, as one would expect from the talented author, while there is also plenty of exciting incident and a happy romance. An excellent novel.

West River at Shing	41.7	0 14.7

North River at Shing	41.7	0 6.4
East River at Shing	41.7	0 6.4

Another attractive and entertaining story of an unusual girl is "The Other Man," also in the Colonial Library series, by Katharine Tynan. It is a tale of the daughter of a "County" family who makes a clandestine marriage with a Socialist poet, the son of a small shopkeeper. A really admirable study, told in simple and charming manner; one of the best efforts of this popular author.

Paul Trent gives us a novel which is characteristically thrilling in "Her Month of Freedom," another of the Colonial Library series. It is a tale of the daughter of the owner of a Greek island who insists on having a month of freedom before she marries a young millionaire. Amazing intrigues follow, with a strong love interest, and the theme is handled with that ingenuity which has made the author a favourite amongst those who like a good story.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Entertainment values have certainly been weaned away from Broadway, their stronghold for years, by the omnivorous talking pictures—as witness "This Is the Night," Paramount's extravagantly funny musical show which is now showing at the King's Theatre.

The three leading personages in "This Is the Night" are Broadway notables who have clicked to the thousands at $3 to $8 per seat in many a successful New York stage comedy for musical revue. Lily Damita, the leading lady of "This Is the Night," only recently completed a successful run in the highly remunerative "Sons O' Guns." Charlie Ruggles, who seems to have turned his full time to work in the talkies, was formerly one of the leading funny men of the Great White Way, playing in such shamus as "Billionaire Butler" and many others. Roland Young, always a sure-bet for comedy entertainment whenever his name appeared in lights in connexion with "Hollo's Wild Out," "Begger on Horseback" and other theatrical works of their kind, is the third member of the hilarity confederates in "This Is the Night."

Strong Cast in "Night Court." Machinations of political corruption in the courts of justice are used as a background for the gripping drama in "Night Court," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest offering which opens at the Queen's Theatre on Wednesday. Heading the strong cast is Phillips Holmes, playing the role of the taxicab chauffeur whose bride is framed and jailed on a morals charge, because she discovered evidence of the judge's graft spoils. Holmes, who scored such a hit in "An American Tragedy," last played in "Two Kinds of Women" and "Broken Lullaby."

Walter Huston is cast in the part of the crooked magistrate who finds himself arraigned before his own court on a murder charge. Huston last was seen in "Beat of the City" and "The Wet Parade." Anita Page negotiates her first straight dramatic role as Mary, the chauffeur's wife. She recently played in "Are You Listening?" and "Sidewalks of New York." Lewis Stone is assigned the characterization of the presiding jurist who is slain because of his crusading activities. Joan Hepburn is the temerarious junior. Noel Francis is Lil, the judge's paramour, and John Miljan is an attorney who aids the underworld in his courtroom operations. Tully Marshall is the night court judge's underworld bower and Warner Richmond is a frame-up stool pigeon. Mary Carlisle plays the part of Elizabeth.

W. S. Van Dyke, who screened "White Shadows in the South Seas," "Trader Horn," "Tarzan" and other recent film hits, directed the daring new feature, combining the terrific drama of the plot with the touching romance between the young couple who find themselves unwittingly in the line of a quest for graft and corrupt politics.

"Careless Lady." Hollywood is revealing a few of her disappointments to Weldon Heyburn, one of the newest Fox Film players.

In making "Careless Lady," the Fox Films comedy to be shown at the King's Theatre next Thursday, the script called for Heyburn, in his role of the New England girl who starts out to get experience and seductiveness after she finds the local swains unresponsive to her charms. Guy Bolton wrote the screen play and dialogue from the original story by Reita Lambert. "The Road to Reno."

Incorporated in the excellent entertainment afforded by "The Road to Reno," which is now showing at the Oriental Theatre, are a number of elements which are bound to please all patrons collectively if not individually. There is the romance of "Buddy" Rogers and Peggy Shannon; he a young college graduate, she a daughter of a divorcee-ridden family. There is the realism of the settings; Reno's spectacular diversions such as gaming halls of the present day, "freedom" ranches, etc. There is the style display afforded by the modes, many of them predicting fashions six months ahead of time. Worn by Lilyan Tashman, Peggy Shannon, Judith Wood and the other actresses. There is the side-splitting comedy provided by Skeets Gallagher as the watchful professional chess player who checks up on every one's behavior. There is the tense drama of numerous scenes in which temperaments clash and emotions gain too powerful a sway, climaxed by the entry of Tom Douglas into the scene of his mother's quickly-decided wedding.

"Devotion" A Splendid Picture. "Devotion," the current RKO Pathe attraction at the Central Theatre, starring Ann Harding, reproduces the famed and lovely Temple District of London. Against this exquisite background, in contrast to its air of history and tradition, there is played an unusually pleasing story of modern romance, light comedy, and drama. That such a story and setting should have Ann Harding, the star is one of the happy combinations too seldom seen in pictures. The star handles expertly a role demanding a wide emotional range. Perhaps never has Miss Harding appeared

Lily Damita, Charlie Ruggles and Roland Young have the leads—need more be said to establish the point that the casting is ideal? On no account miss this production.

proves once again that she is an actress of fine ability, whose talent is not confined to one type of role. Leslie Howard, who will be remembered for his fine work in "Outward Bound" and "Reserved for Ladies," is splendid in the leading role opposite Miss Harding. Robert Williams does another outstanding characterization. Robert Milton did fine work in directing his entertaining film.

A REVOLVER DUEL

DISTRICT WATCHMAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

A stand up duel with revolvers at close range between two district watchmen attached to the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs and detailed for duty in the Western District culminated in both men being removed to hospital during the early hours of yesterday morning. One had a bullet wound in the abdomen and died during the afternoon.

The occurrence created a sensation in the district shortly after mid-night when shots were fired in rapid succession in Des Voeux Road, at its junction with Western Street, immediately below the No. 7 Police Station.

Police officers from the Station immediately rushed out and found one of the two men lying gravely wounded.

The Police are pursuing their enquiries into the affair and up to the present little is known of what actually took place between the two men. It was whilst they were changing duties that the shooting started.

Lai Chuen, District Watchman No. 60, had been on patrol in the Western District from 6 p.m. on Saturday and was due to be relieved at mid-night by Shiu Kwan-chiu, District Watchman No. 99, who was to patrol the district until 6 a.m. when he was to be relieved.

The two men met just below the West Point Police Station at mid-night and appeared to have become involved in a quarrel. The exact nature of the argument is not known but the two men lost their tempers and revolvers were drawn.

For the next few moments the two watchmen exchanged shots with each other both firing practically simultaneously, although it is not known which of the two was the first to draw.

One man discharged six shots from his revolver while the other fired four rounds. Lai Chuen, the man coming off duty, was wounded in the abdomen, as well as in the right arm, and instantly collapsed when he received the more serious wound. Shiu Kwan-chiu was not seriously hurt, receiving a shot in the left elbow.

When the two men were removed to hospital by the Police of the West Point Police Station it was found that Lai Chuen was in a critical condition and dying. Depositions were taken later in the morning. He died shortly after 3 p.m.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, yesterday.

The Golden Text was—"Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed." (John 6: 27).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible—"Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and said unto them, Peace be unto you. And when he had said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. They were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord." (John 20: 19, 20).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.—"To show that the substance of himself was Spirit and the body no more perfect because of death and no less material until the ascension (his further spiritual exhalation), Jesus waited until mortal or fleshly sense had relinquished the belief of substance-matter, and spiritual sense had quenched all earthly yearnings. Thus he found the eternal Ego, and proved that he and the Father were inseparable and God and His ESSAY CONTEST.

KING'S THEATRE PRIZES PRESENTED

Medals, books, and free passes were the prizes presented to winners in the King's Theatre's recent essay competition. The winning essay has already been published.

The Hon. Mr. S. W. Tao presented the prizes on Saturday, and in addressing the gathering at the function he said:

When the management of the King's Theatre asked me to come here to-day and distribute the prizes to the Winners of the Essay Competition instituted by the management, it gave me much pleasure in accepting the invitation to perform this interesting function. The competition was opened to students of all schools in the Colony and six prizes were offered for the best 6 Essays on the cooling system of this Theatre.

Intending competitors were given the opportunity of coming here to study and examine into the principle of the system and every detail of its mechanism was thoroughly explained and demonstrated to them. To the un-initiated many would think that no fresh air comes into the room and that the same air is being used over and over again. But as a matter of fact a constant flow of fresh air enters this room through the in-take fans the vitiated air being drawn out of it by powerful exhaust-fans, thus, keeping the air here pure and sweet.

The competition had the advantage of learning this system before they write and their essays were written therefore with a practical knowledge of the subject which no school in a class room can impart.

The six best essays were selected by Judges upon the merits of their English composition and the correctness of their technical description of the cooling plants. The management therefore tender its hearty thanks to the Judges, the Editors of the Hongkong Telegraph and Hongkong Daily Press who adjudged the English part of the composition and Mr. Macfarlane of the Dairy Farm & Cold Storage Co., who adjudged the technical part of the composition. The competition has a great educational value and I congratulate the management for having promoted it.

Ladies and gentlemen, I know you are anxious to see the beautiful picture that follows, and I will not therefore keep you any longer. I will now announce the names of the winners and ask them to come up and receive their prizes. (Applause).

The Winners.

First prize.—Tse Shui-man, St. Paul's College.
Second prize.—Chan Kim-ying, Munsang College.
Third prize.—Tsoi Mong-yuk, St. Paul's College.
Fourth prize.—John Poon, St. Paul's College.
Fifth prize.—Fong Hien-sui, Munsang College.
Sixth prize.—Gabriel Lau, St. Paul's College.

YOUTHS SENTENCED.

FOUR AND HALF MONTHS FOR STEALING

Sentences totalling four and a half months were imposed on two lads of 17 and 13 at the Kowloon Magistracy before Mr. Fraser on Saturday morning, when they were charged with five larcenies extending over a period of about a month.

Prosecuting for the Police, Detective Sergeant Lamont said the defendants were regular thieves. They would wait in doorways of houses in Mongkok early in the morning, and whenever the opportunity occurred, they would dart in and take away the first thing they could lay hands on.

Both lads had been convicted for larcenies before, went on Sergeant Lamont. As a matter of fact, the younger one was perhaps the worse of the two. He had been convicted five times and had been given several chances to reform. The last occasion he was convicted he was sent to the Police Boys' Club, but ran away on the same day.

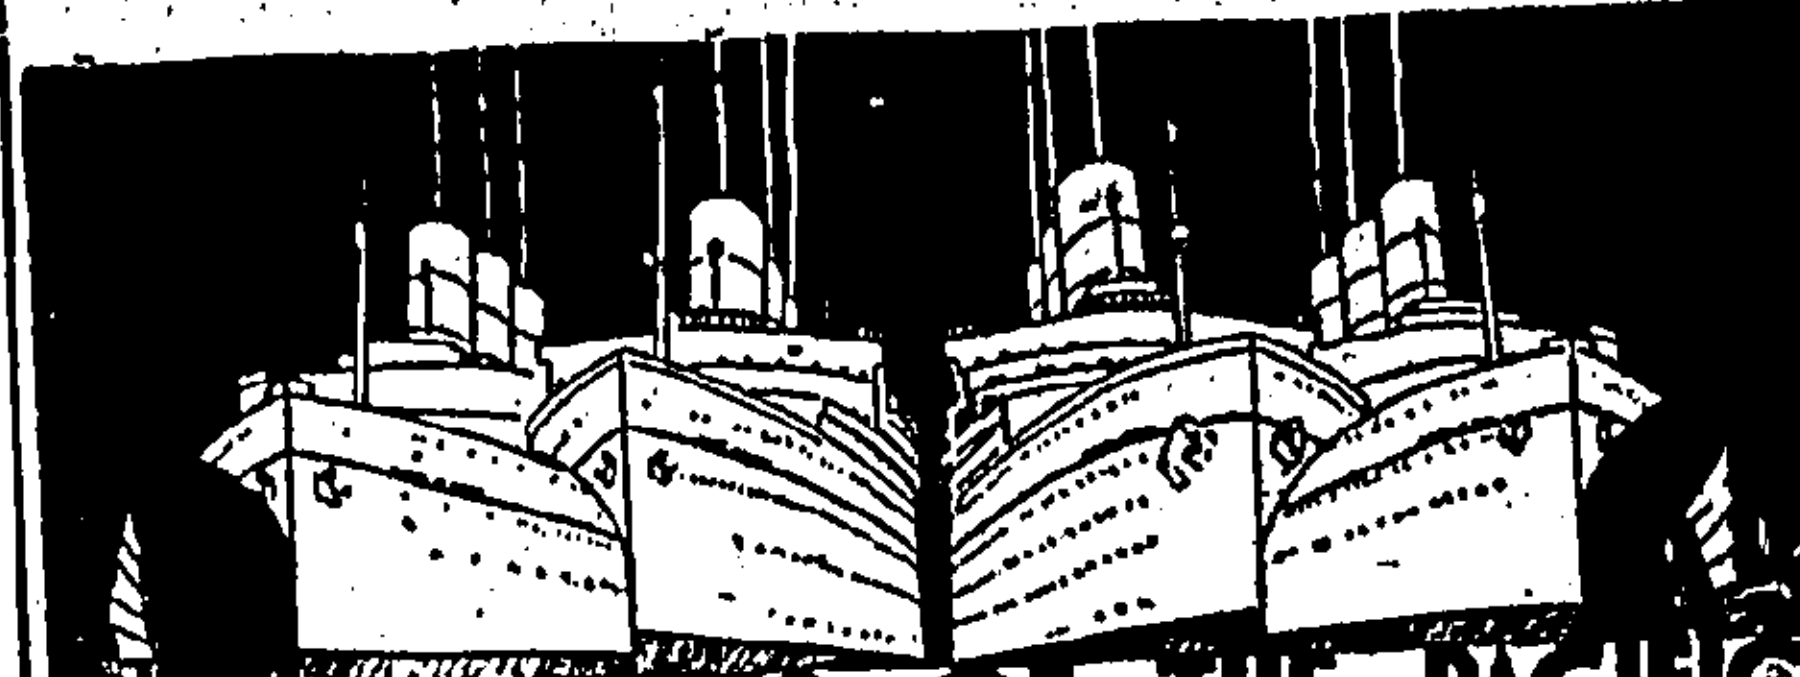

In passing sentence, his Worship said he would very much like to send him to an educational institution, but he did not think that would do any good.

A third lad who was on the same charges was remanded, his Worship ordering him to be sent to the S.C.A. for inquiries, as his record was not as bad as that of the others.

BRIBERY CASE
DISMISSED.CHARGE CONSIDERED NOT SUFFICIENTLY PROVED

"The onus is on the prosecution to prove their case beyond any reasonable doubt, but I don't think that they have discharged that duty," remarked Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy on Saturday morning when a young Chinese, Chan Hi-yik, part-owner of a motorjunk, was again brought before the Court on a charge of allegedly having offered to Mr. W. Hillyer, Chief Junk Inspector at the Harbour Office, a tea-set on September 5 with a view to influencing his conduct as a Government servant.

It was alleged by the prosecution that after a permit for his junk had been cancelled, defendant went to the house of the complainant with a tea-set, which he left with the house boy, saying that "Mr. Hillyer knew what it was all about."

This permit allowed his junk to leave the harbour at any time for Lokmachau and other ports in Chinese waters without first obtaining permission from the Harbour Master. It was a monthly permit and was issued to the defendant during the months of July and August. At the end of August, however, the Harbour Master considered that the number of trips made by the defendant's vessel did not justify this permit being renewed and accordingly the permit was cancelled.

Application Refused

As a result of this, it was alleged that the defendant had been to the Harbour Office repeatedly to see Mr. Hillyer, who at last referred him to the Harbour Master. Defendant went to see the Harbour Master, but it was of no avail, his application again being refused.

Mr. Hillyer testified to having met defendant only officially and said he did not include him in his circle of friends. On making inquiries at the end of August, he found that defendant's junk had made only five trips in July and 11 in August. This, he considered, was not frequent enough to justify the permit being renewed.

Mr. Hillyer's boy gave evidence of opening the door to the defendant on September and receiving a parcel, which defendant asked him to give his master.

Defendant denied the allegation, saying that a friend from Hoihow had presented him with two tea-sets, which could not be bought in Hongkong; and as a token of friendship, he gave one to Mr. Hillyer.

Case Not Proved.

After hearing the evidence, his Worship said he did not find the case sufficiently proved to his

OBITUARY

DEATH OF A POPULAR
YOUNG RESIDENT

A large circle of friends learned with regret of the death of Mr. Cecil Neave, of the office staff of the Kowloon Docks, who passed away in hospital at midnight on Friday, at the early age of 29. He had been ailing for some time, and was taken to hospital, his condition becoming critical on Thursday, so that the end was not unexpected. A particularly poignant feature of his death was the fact that he was engaged to be married, and his fiancée was to have left home shortly, the wedding being fixed for next month.

The late Mr. Neave came out to Hongkong from Newcastle in the spring of 1925, to join the dock company, and became a popular member of the staff, soon making a wide circle of friends. He joined the Saint Andrew's Society, and was for some time a keen member of the Scottish Company of the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps. He leaves his parents and a brother and sister at home to mourn him, and much sympathy will be felt for them, and for the deceased's fiancée, in the loss they have been called upon to bear.

The late Mr. Neave was a nephew of Mr. Thomas Neave, superintendent engineer at Kowloon Docks for many years.

The funeral took place in the Happy Valley cemetery on Saturday afternoon, a large gathering of friends and colleagues from the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock Company being present. The chief mourners were Mr. Norman Raitton, Mr. E. Cock, Mr. E. L. Hosie, Mr. D. Gow and Mr. W. Walker.

The Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen officiated at the graveside. A profusion of floral tributes covered the grave, among which were wreaths from his "Sorrowing Father and Mother", Brother and Sister, Kitty, Frankie, Johnnie and Tommy, Mrs. Thomas Neave, Tom and Florrie, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cock, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Simpson, General Office Staff, Drawing Office Staff and Kowloon Dock Recreation Club.

satisfaction that the tea-set was given as a bribe, and he must discharge the defendant.

Turning to the defendant, his Worship said, "You are a lucky man. There is very little doubt in this case, but you are entitled to the benefit of this doubt. You are discharged, but you must realise that bribing a Government servant is a very serious offence. You have been more foolish than criminal."

BETTER CHURCH
MUSIC.PLEA BY DEAN AT ST.
ANDREW'S CHURCH

A plea for better Church music was made by the Very Rev. Dean A. Swann at St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, yesterday morning, on the occasion of the dedication of the re-constructed organ.

Worship, the Dean said, was an attitude of body, mind and spirit, and when we worshipped God we had towards him that attitude. Referring to Church music, Dean Swann said it was impossible to over-estimate the part which music played in our worship, particularly in the Church of England, and, therefore, to over-estimate the part played by those who are responsible for the music. A great responsibility fell on those who chose the music and those who performed it—the choir, organ and congregation. Music was a great bond between the Christian peoples; it lifted them above the level of controversy to the level of affirmation. He did not want them to forget that primarily service was an offering, not receiving. In all their worship, therefore, their music must be the best they could offer, the best they knew and the best they could make. It was impossible to spend too much trouble about the selection of their Church music or about its performance. There must be no vanity in worship; members of the congregation must sing, not for their own glory, but for the glory of God.

Over-elaboration.

Music in the Church had been sometimes over-elaborate, sometimes poor and weak, and the worst period in the history of Church music in England was about 75 years ago, the period of decadent art. It had been said that no form of art had been overrun by unqualified amateurs as English Church music was between the years 1860 and 1900. It required little skill to write and little skill to produce. In the Church of England, hymns formed the bulk of the regular music, and it had been said that many hymns of that period were marked by a mentality which must have tended to depress the spiritual vigour of those who sang them. Many people clung to the old favourites and in some cases rightly so. The real old favourites were those which had lasted for centuries, but there were many unworthy hymns which had already lasted too long. We had at our disposal, nowadays, a wealth of lovely music which had been recovered by experts during the last 25 years, and one could find collections of them in the newer hymnals. There was, of course, a place for devotional music, wonderful hymns they so seldom used.

In concluding his address, the Dean said "I am definitely of the opinion that for parish churches congregational music should be the ideal. The choir and organ are there to lead the congregation, and if that is so the service becomes a corporate act of worship; otherwise it becomes an act of entertainment."

The service opened with a procession (Psalm CL) which was unaccompanied, followed by the prayer of dedication by the Dean. The lesson taken from II Chronicles, 29, 9-15 and II Chronicles, 29, 25-28, and was also read by the Dean. The choir rendered the anthem "O come, let us worship" (Mendelssohn), and the Te Deum Laudamus music by Sir Charles Villiers Stanford.

A collection was taken in aid of the Choir and Organ fund.

The Reconstructed Organ.

When St. Andrew's church was opened in 1906 no organ was installed and at first a harmonium was hired. In 1907 an American organ was purchased for the sum of $175 and this instrument was used until 1911. In January 1910, the Church Vestry decided to open an organ fund with a view to securing an organ worthy of the Church. It was estimated that the sum required would be about $5,000, and at a Vestry meeting held in March 1910 it was announced that this sum had been raised. Tenders were invited from three English firms, and that of Messrs. J. W. Walker and Sons was accepted. The organ was built in England under the supervision of Mr. E. L. Frost a member of the Vestry, who went on furlough at that time. Upon completion it was dismantled, marked for re-erecting, packed and shipped to Kowloon, where it was erected in St. Andrew's Church by Mr. Tsang Pook, assisted by Messrs. Frost, Duncan and Chapman.

The dedication ceremony took place on June 24th, 1911, and was performed by Right Rev. G. H. Lander, D.D., Bishop of Victoria. Some trouble was experienced at a later date with the cut pallets, and these were converted into solid pallets, effectively remedying the trouble but somewhat increasing the heaviness of the touch. In 1930, the tracker action began to need serious attention. In January, 1931, the Church Council decided that steps should be taken to remedy the defects, and to mark the fact of 1931 being the 25th Anniversary of the consecration of the Church, it was agreed that the organ should be enlarged and reconstructed with tubular-pneumatic action. Accordingly, a fund was opened in March, and Mr. W. C. Blackett, the builder of several organs in the colony, including that in St. John's Cathedral, was asked to draw up a scheme for rebuilding the instrument. The work was put in hand in June, 1931, and from December 1931 until June, 1932 the organ was out of action, and a piano and a small organ were installed in the choir. The completed instrument is a tribute to the skill and experience of Mr. Blackett. The required sum, $7,500 was completely raised by October 1931.

A feature of the work is the fact that although the organ has been considerably enlarged, there has been no encroachment on the floor-space of the Church or Vestry. This had been made possible by the placing of the new choir organ over the passage from the clergy vestry into the Church, and the raising of the Pedal Bourdon pipes to an overhead position in the Vestry to make room for the new pedal open diapason. The great organ has been projected forwards and upwards on a cove, improving the appearance of the organ front.

To-night a recital will be given by Mr. Rupert Baldwin, A.T.C.L., assisted by Messrs. F. W. Dann, J. W. Baldwin (St. Andrew's Choir) and H. J. Best (Cathedral Choir).

TUBERCULOSIS.

PRAISE FOR THE DIRECTOR OF PAPWORTH CENTRE

London, Sept. 10.

Tributes were paid at the conference of the International Union against Tuberculosis at the Hague yesterday to the work of Sir Pendrill Vallier Jones, founder and medical director of the Papworth village settlement in Cambridgeshire, for after-care of tuberculous patients.

In a paper contributed by Sir Pendrill, he declared that the village settlement was essential in the interests of public health.

Papworth had succeeded because its director had made use of business acumen and industry and the skill of the patients, who had solved their own economic problem.

The importance attached to after-care was demonstrated by the fact that the international committee, over which he will preside, is to study, collate, and co-ordinate the methods employed all over the world.—British Wire.

U.S. PUBLIC LOAN.

RAPID OVERSUBSCRIPTION OF TREASURY ISSUE

Washington, Sept. 10.

The issue of $31,150,000,000 in Treasury Notes and "Certificates of Indebtedness" for the purpose of meeting the huge, maturing American obligations in public debt, and to provide funds for the Reconstruction Corporation, has been six times over-subscribed, according to the Secretary of the Treasury.—Reuter's American Service.

[According to a previous message the Government's programme provides for the issue of Treasury Notes to the value of $3750,000,000 at 3½ per cent, maturing in five years, and Certificates of Indebtedness to the value of $3400,000,000 at 1½ per cent, maturing September 15, 1933. The purpose of the loan is to meet the deficiency on the year's working and to encourage industry and thus overcome the widespread trade depression.]

WORST DISASTER ON C. E. R.

BIG CASUALTY LIST IN DERAILMENT

Changchun, Sept. 11.

The worst disaster in the history of the Chinese Eastern Railway occurred to-day, when more than 100 were killed and injured in a derailment 40 miles from Harbin.

The rails had been maliciously removed by bandits, who robbed those who were not killed.

The train that came to grief was the one that left here last night. The engine and six coaches were smashed to pieces.—Reuter.

Safe Passage

Harbin, Sept. 11.

Members of the League of Nations Commission who are returning to Europe via Siberia, have passed safely through the floods and train-wreckers on the C. E. R. M. Claudel and Dr. Schnee left Tsitsihar by air yesterday for Manchuria, where they will join the trans-Siberian train.—Reuter's Special.

TAKES HEALTH TRIP.

JIMMY WALKER STARTS ON JOURNEY TO EUROPE

New York, Sept. 11.

"I am being 'Shanghaied' by my medical man" declared Jimmy Walker, ex-Mayor of New York, who recently resigned from the position, following the determination of the Governor of the State to hear the charges made against him.

The ex-Mayor sailed for Europe on the Italian liner Conte Grande. It was learned that he is making a "round trip" to Europe for the sake of his health.—Reuter's American Service.

RECOGNITION

JAPANESE PLANS COMPLETED

Tokyo, Sept. 10.

The Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs to-day submitted for the perusal of the Emperor the draft treaty for the recognition of the new state, Manchukuo.

His Imperial Majesty referred the draft to the Privy Council, which body is expected to complete its deliberations by September 13.

The formal recognition of Manchukuo will be announced on the following day, September 14.—Reuter.

Foreign Comment

London, Sept. 10.

While it is recognised that two coming events—the publication of the Japan-Manchukuo Treaty and the Lytton Report—will constitute a major crisis in the Far East, responsible British opinion tends to await the definite contents of the Lytton Report regarding the parts of it which leaked out as misleading and not informing to public opinion.

The Financial News, however, remarks that enough is already known to indicate that the two documents will be mutually exclusive, which fundamental opposition must produce deeply significant decisions, either by the League of Nations and Japan or by both. Further, the same paper observes that Pacific relations are almost at a deadlock. Too much importance need not be attached to the continued presence in the Pacific of the United States Fleet; but the stirrings of nationalism in China and Japan are too deep to admit of easy compromise between them. In the Autumn a crisis may well lie in a decision whether weakness or exacerbation of nationalism is to predominate.

Whether, with difficulties in the economic background, Japan will be compelled towards or precluded from implementing her ambitious Manchurian programme, must be one of the major decisions of the year.—Reuter.

Liabilities are 781,000,000 and their assets 509,000,000.

According to documents revealed in the course of the proceedings the Match King's debtors included the Communist leader Kilbom to whom he lent 35,000 kronor in addition to 100,000 advanced for Kilbom's newspaper.—Reuter.

INTERPORT CRICKETER SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

CHANNEL WINS

HOPELESSLY ADVERSE CONDITIONS

ZIMMY GIVES UP ATTEMPT

(Telegraph Special.)

London, Sept. 11.
Charles Zibelman, the legless American swimmer, better known as "Zimmy," failed in his attempt to swim the Channel from Dover to Calais.

Conditions were all against the success of the attempt. A strong south-westerly wind and a choppy sea prevailed throughout the period Zimmy was in the water and soon after leaving Dover he was fighting vainly against a strong flood tide.

30 MILES IN 19 HOURS.

He started off from Dover on Friday with a large supply of his favourite cigars for nourishment, but he was compelled to abandon the effort in the early hours of yesterday morning after being in the water for approximately nineteen hours.

In that time, a remarkable enough feat for a legless swimmer, he had covered a distance of at least thirty miles, but owing to the adverse conditions, carrying him steadily away from his objective, he was only half-way across when he consented to be taken out of the water.—Reuter.

SPANISH ROYAL EXILES

MONARCHISTS GOING TO WEST AFRICA

Madrid, Sept. 12.

Fifty-five monarchist political deportees, mostly grandees and including relatives of the ex-King Alfonso, Don Alfonso and Don Francisco Bourbon, have been sent to Cadix from prison en route to Spanish West Africa.—Reuter.

DE VALERA READY TO FIGHT

MUST BE NO TALK OF SURRENDER

London, Sept. 11.

There must be no talk of surrender, declared Mr. de Valera, in a speech at Kilkenny to-day. He re-affirmed the intention of the Fianna Fail Government to withhold the land annuities from England.

"We are going to fight," he said, "and we are going to win. We must be prepared for sacrifices but there is no soft bargain with Britain."—Reuter.

WANG CHING-WEI

NANKING SCHEMES GO ASTRAY

Nanking, Sept. 12.

It is reported that Mr. Wang Ching-wei's recent departure from Nanking was due to the rejection of a proposal to appoint two substitutes as members of the Standing Committee of the Central Political Council owing to the absence of General Chiang Kai-shek and Mr. Hu Han-min.—Reuter.

At the half-yearly meeting of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Ltd., held on Saturday, the net profit of the bank for the year ending March 31, 1932, was reported as follows:—

Zimmy, the legless swimmer whose attempt to cross the Channel was abandoned.

BATTLE OF MARNE

FRENCH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

"REMEMBER"

(Special to "Telegraph.")

Paris, Sept. 11.
France is to-day celebrating the eighteenth anniversary of the Battle of the Marne and the one word "Remember" is the keynote of French feeling.

It was inspired by a speech delivered at the unveiling of the Varennes War Memorial, which was presented to France by Americans, M. Herriot performing the ceremony.

Observing that France had frequently been accused of late of being warlike, M. Herriot claimed that a heartfelt desire for peace had inspired all her actions.

FORCE INSTINCTS.

France, he said, had been careful not to awaken by imprudent demonstrations those instincts towards the employment of force which could not be controlled once they had been let loose.

He expressed the gratitude of France to American statesmen who were "endeavouring to establish by reason that order which had been disturbed by violence."

He emphasised, in particular, the value of the Hoover proposals for the reduction of armaments.

MANILA SHIP WRECKED

ALL ON BOARD SAFE ASHORE

Manila, Sept. 9.

The interisland steamer Misamis, of L. Everett and Company, was wrecked on a rock off Calavite Point, north Mindoro, last night, according to a radio message intercepted by the Bureau of Posts radio station at Iloilo at 11.15 last night and relayed to the Manila office. The message was sent by H. D. Cranston, local business man who was a passenger on the Misamis bound for Cullon, and read as follows:

"Misamis total wreck and abandoned in rock Calavite Point, north Mindoro. Everybody safe but short of food and water. Notify owners and send help immediately. Passengers safe on shore. Sydney Maru taking me to Zamboanga. Notify office and Cullon office."

The Misamis left Manila at 6 p.m., last Wednesday for Coron, Cullon, Cuyo and Puerto Princesa with passengers and cargo. She was owned by Carlos Palanca and was operated by L. Everett and Co.

A fine of $50, or, in default, six weeks' imprisonment was imposed by the Hon. Comdr. Hoke at the Marine Court this morning, on Lam Chan, the captain of the steam tug Talbot.

GOLF LINKS DRAMA

BRITONS IN FIGHT WITH BANDITS

CLUBS V. GUNS

MESSRS. MELHUIH AND HANSELL

(Special to "Telegraph.")

Shanghai, Sept. 12.

A vivid story of the golf links drama near Harbin when two senior members of the staff of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank fought desperately and with success against five armed bandits to avoid sharing the fate of Mr. Corkran and Mrs. Pawley, is related in messages from Harbin.

It now transpires that the heroes of the affair were Mr. R. P. Melhuish and Mr. W. N. Hansell, both of the H.K. & S. Banking Corporation.

The bandits attempted to kidnap them on a golf course near Harbin on Saturday afternoon.

BANK MEN ATTACK.

Although their assailants were five in number and were all armed with revolvers, Mr. Melhuish and Mr. Hansell acted swiftly, deciding that attack was the best defence, and sailing in vigorously with their golf clubs.

So purposefully did they wield their clubs that the bandits took to flight. As they dispersed, lying in different directions, however, one of them hesitated a moment to turn round and fire at the Britons with a Mauser pistol.

INTERPORT CRICKETER.

Mr. Hansell was struck in the arm, but the wound is not regarded as serious.

Messrs. Melhuish and Hansell joined the Harbin branch of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank at the end of last year as manager and assistant manager respectively.

Mr. Hansell was formerly of Shanghai. He is an expert cricketer and played in the interport match against Hongkong in 1928.—Reuter.

CORKRAN OUTRAGE

RANSOM DEMAND STORY UNTRUE

There is no truth whatever in the reports that the bandits who kidnapped Mr. Charles Corkran and Mrs. Pawley near Newchwang have demanded the payment of $250,000 as ransom. The local naval authorities have received a wireless message from H.M.S. Sandwich, relaying information from the British Consul at Newchwang declaring that no ransom has yet been asked for as contact has not yet been established with the captors of Mr. Corkran and Mrs. Pawley.

DIPLOMATIC PRESSURE.

"It is urgently desired," the message proceeds, "that this erroneous report should be suppressed as it is likely to lead to a relaxation of efforts to trace the captors and establish contact, and similarly, a relaxation of public interest and such diplomatic pressure as may ultimately be required to achieve success in securing their release."

The present whereabouts of the missing Britons are unknown.

The Royal Observatory reports that the pressure is highest to the north-east of Hokkaido, and relatively low over the Northern China Sea. The direction of the wind is variable, but the pressure is generally light.

CHENG CONVICTION TO STAND

FULL COURT DECISION AGAINST DEFENCE

SENTENCE TO BE PASSED ON WEDNESDAY

SENTENCE OF DEATH WILL BE PASSED UPON CHENG KWOK-YAU ON WEDNESDAY MORNING NEXT, THE FULL COURT TO-DAY ANNOUNCING A DECISION UPHOLDING HIS CONVICTION FOR PROCURING THE MURDER OF GEORGE FUNG, ALIENATOR OF THE AFFECTIONS OF LAI MING-FAY, HIS FIANCE.

The judgment centred upon the admissibility of the evidence of Edward Zimmern and Christie and both judges upheld the decision of the Chief Justice at the Criminal Sessions.

Crowds thronged the court-room and corridors, but Cheng Kwok-yau was not present to hear the decision.

Mr. R. C. H. Lim, counsel for the defence, in the absence of Mr. Eldon Potter and Mr. F. C. Jenkin, announced that application would be made for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

FULL TEXT OF JUDGMENTS

The Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice Wood, delivering the principal judgment, said:

The accused was indicted for murder. The particulars in the indictment indicated that the charge would be supported by evidence adduced to show that he was an accessory before the fact in the murder of George Fung. The murder was alleged to have been committed on March 24, 1932. The incidents evidenced for the Crown occurred between February 21st 1932 and the date of the alleged murder.

No issue other than the issues raised by the indictment was divulged at the trial by the defence either by evidence or in cross-examination. The accused was convicted. Sentence has been postponed by the learned Chief Justice who was the trial judge, pending the consideration by this Court of certain questions of law reserved.

SUBSTANTIAL POINTS.

The questions of law have been formulated; but the substantial points may be stated as follows: "Whether the evidence of the two witnesses for the Crown, Zimmern and Christie to the effect that the accused incited them to murder Fung was properly received, and further whether the case as evidenced at the trial should not have been withdrawn from the jury."

The facts proved for the prosecution are these:—George Fung was killed on March 24th in Shan Kwong Road, Happy Valley. He was shot at close range from behind by one Wong Nam Sheung. The shooting occurred at 8.30 p.m. and he died within half an hour. With the deceased at the time was a young woman named Lai Ming-fay.

LAI MING-FAY.

Lai Ming-fay had lived under the protection of the accused who intended to marry her, for two years prior to February 22. During the second year she had fallen in love with the deceased and finally, on February 22 she left the accused and joined the deceased.

The accused was in affluent circumstances. He had in his employment a chauffeur named Lau King.

On a day between February 23 and March 8, Lau King met one Teul Yung-sham who has been a Crown witness, gave him $80, pointed Fung out to him and incited him to kill Fung. On the following day, Teul Yung-sham met the accused and arranged to have Fung killed.

One of these men was known as Ah To-nui.

KAM TOI MEETING.

Ah To-nui was known to Lau, Lau Tsui and Ah To-nui had been together on or about February 25. On March 8, at the Kam Toi Hotel, in the afternoon, Lau, Tsui and Wong were together. Lau was there at different times between 3.30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Observations were conducted from the hotel, upon the movements of Fung. On March 9, Tsui rented a cubicle in the Happy Valley district for the use of the conspirators. This cubicle was resorted to by both Lau and Wong. A fire-arm was kept there.

On the evening of March 19, Tsui, Wong and another man went out from the cubicle intending to shoot Fung. No shot was fired and the attempt was abandoned on that occasion.

NEW AGENT.

On March 20, Tsui enlisted the services of a new agent named Kwan to kill Fung. A second firearm was introduced into the cubicle on the same date for Kwan's use. On March 24 at 7.45 p.m. the conspirators attending at the cubicle included Tsui, and Kwan went out and loitered in Shan Kwong Road. Fung and Lai Ming-fay came out of a house and Fung was shot by Wong. Tsui was present in a car in order to aid the assassins to escape.

On March 26th, Lau paid $2,000 to Tsui as a reward to the conspirators.

FAY'S DEPARTURE.

On February 22 (I go back in date and cite the evidence given by Lai Ming-fay), Lai Ming-fay was living with the accused at No. 60, Village Road, Happy Valley. On that day, Fung took a room for her at the Nathan Hotel, Kowloon, which was used by the girl and himself.

On the 24th February, Lai Ming-fay met the accused in the Hongkong Hotel by her own appointment. There she handed to him certain jewellery and asked him not to interfere with her any more.

The accused replied that he would never let the two live happily together and would spend all his money in preventing it.

On 18th March in the early morning the girl left the room occupied by herself and Fung in the Nathan Hotel to answer the telephone (which rang several times).

M.C.C. TEAM SURPRISE

K. S. DULEEPSINHJI DROPS OUT

FOR REASONS OF HEALTH

London, Sept. 11.

It is officially stated at the Staines residence of the Maharajah of Nawangar (Ranji) that K. S. Duleepsinhji will be unable to go to Australia with the M.C.C. team.

The famous Sussex skipper is shortly going to Switzerland for health reasons.

Paynter, the Lancashire left-hander, has already been asked to accompany the M.C.C. team to Australia lest Duleepsinhji should be unable to join them. Moreover, there has been some criticism in certain London journals of the inclusion in the team of two Indians, the argument being that an English team should be chosen.

It is not, however, thought that the criticisms have affected Duleepsinhji's decision. He has not been well for some time past and was unable to appear in the closing matches of the season.—Reuter.

DOLLAR REMAINS UNCHANGED

DESPITE RISE IN SILVER

The Hongkong dollar remains unchanged at 1s. 4 1/8d, despite rises in the silver quotations both in London and New York. The local market is very quiet.

Silver rose in London 3/16ths. China and India bought, and there were small offerings.

In New York, silver advanced 1/8th, the market being steady.

It was stated that the incident took place some time between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m.

ARCTIC SEA DISASTER FEARS

S.O.S. MESSAGES FROM HUTCHINSONS

FLYING FAMILY

NO TRACE FOUND BY RESCUE CRAFT

Copenhagen, Sept. 11.

There is grave reason to fear that disaster has overtaken Mr. and Mrs. George Hutchinson and their family in the Arctic Sea.

S.O.S. signals were received from their giant amphibian machine. A powerful British trawler rushed at full speed to the rescue and failed to find any trace of their craft.

The S.O.S. messages were picked up at Angmagssalik towards which the plane was flying. Mr. Hutchinson demanding urgent assistance, announcing that the craft had been compelled to make a forced landing on the sea near the Greenland coast.

The message was also picked up by the British trawler, Port Talbot, which immediately ceased fishing operations and went at full speed to the rescue.

RADIO SUDDENLY CEASES.

Mr. Hutchinson must have realised that the rough seas were dangerous to his craft and maintained wireless contact with the Port Talbot for over an hour, impressing the urgency of the matter.

After an hour, despite all the efforts of the Port Talbot's wireless operator, no answer could be obtained from the Hutchinson machine.

PORT TALBOT'S REPORTS.

The last messages from Angmagssalik consist of reports from the master of the Port Talbot, which arrived this evening at the position given by Mr. Hutchinson and found no trace of the machine.

It was only four hours after the receipt of the first S.O.S. call from the Hutchinson machine that the Port Talbot arrived at the position given, namely, Lat. 65.28 North, Long. 38.45 W.

AMPHIBIAN PLANE.

The machine was an amphibian and there was every hope that she would ride the seas until the arrival of the rescue ship. The Port Talbot is now engaged in scouring the district for miles around in the hope that the craft was forced down elsewhere than Mr. Hutchinson believed himself to be.

The party aboard the missing machine consists of Mr. and Mrs. George Hutchinson, their two daughters, aged eight and six respectively, and a crew of four.

They were attempting to fly from New York to Edinburgh, via Greenland and Iceland. They arrived at Julianashavn safely on September 7, from Godthaab, and took off yesterday for Angmagssalik.

The Hutchinson machine carried an ordinary undercarriage for land flying when she took off from New York but this was detached at Nova Scotia and sent by steamer to Edinburgh for the later stages of the flight.—Reuter.

Besides being an outstanding example of what can be achieved without a sex theme, the picture now being shown at the Queen's Theatre under the title of "When a Feller Needs a Friend," serves as another vehicle for a display of clever juvenile acting talent on the part of little Jackie Cooper. With him also appears Charles (Chick) Sales, in the part of a mandrake, but altogether likeable old characters who add much to the value of the picture.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

In order to better explain the following hand to you, I have given both East and West the king of spades. There are several principles of play involved in the hand.

♠ 9-7-4		♠ (K)-8-
♥ 9-3		♥ 5-(2)
♦ 5-2		♦ A-8-4
♣ K-J-7-5		♣ Q-9-8-6
♠ (K)-3-	NORTH	♠ (K)-8-
♥ 10-7-	WEST	♥ 5-(2)
♦ 6-4-2	EAST	♦ A-8-4
♣ K-Q-	DEALER	♣ Q-9-8-
♠ 9-6-3	SOUTH	♠ 6
♠ A-Q-10-6
♥ A-K-Q
♦ 10-7
♣ A-10-3-2

The Bidding.

The contract bidding, employing the one over one, would be South one spade, West pass, North two spades—a very weak hand, but with four trump and a doubleton, you should give partner a chance. East would pass and South, with his big hand, should now jump to four spades.

The Play.

West's opening lead would be the king of diamonds. East should play the eight showing his partner the ace. The first play—supposing that West continues with the queen of diamonds and then a small diamond.

When East plays the ace, the declarer must be careful not to make the mistake of trumping with the six of spades—he must trump with the queen and now lead a small club, winning in dummy with the king. He should now play the nine of spades from dummy. East, if he has the king, should not cover, and now the declarer has the six spot to play on dummy's lead.

If East held three spades to the king, that is the only way that the declarer can pick up the king, while if West happened to hold the king, West would now win the trick and would then become an entry for the declarer in dummy.

Suppose, however, that after holding the first trick with the king of diamonds, West were to shift to his singleton club. The declarer should play small from dummy. East would not go up with the queen but would play his eight spot.

The declarer would win with the ten. That lead of the four of clubs warns him that there is a singleton club out and now, regardless of the location of the king of spades, the declarer must not take any finesse, but should immediately play his ace of spades and then lead the queen of spades.

Regardless of who holds the king—East or West—they are not going to be able to get in a club ruff. Of course, if West should happen to hold three spades to the king, when he shifted to the singleton club, there would be no way for the declarer to make his contract, but that would be the only holding that would prevent declarer from going game.

Paul Gorguloff, the Russian political fanatic who assassinated President Doumer was gesticulating wildly and demanding the death sentence in a rambling speech to the court, when this picture was taken at the trial. Meanwhile his bearded attorney, Henri Geraud, made a gesture showing he realized the futility of trying to defend his client.

The wife of Paul Gorguloff a pathetic figure as she pleaded for mercy to be shown her husband, out of consideration for their unborn child.

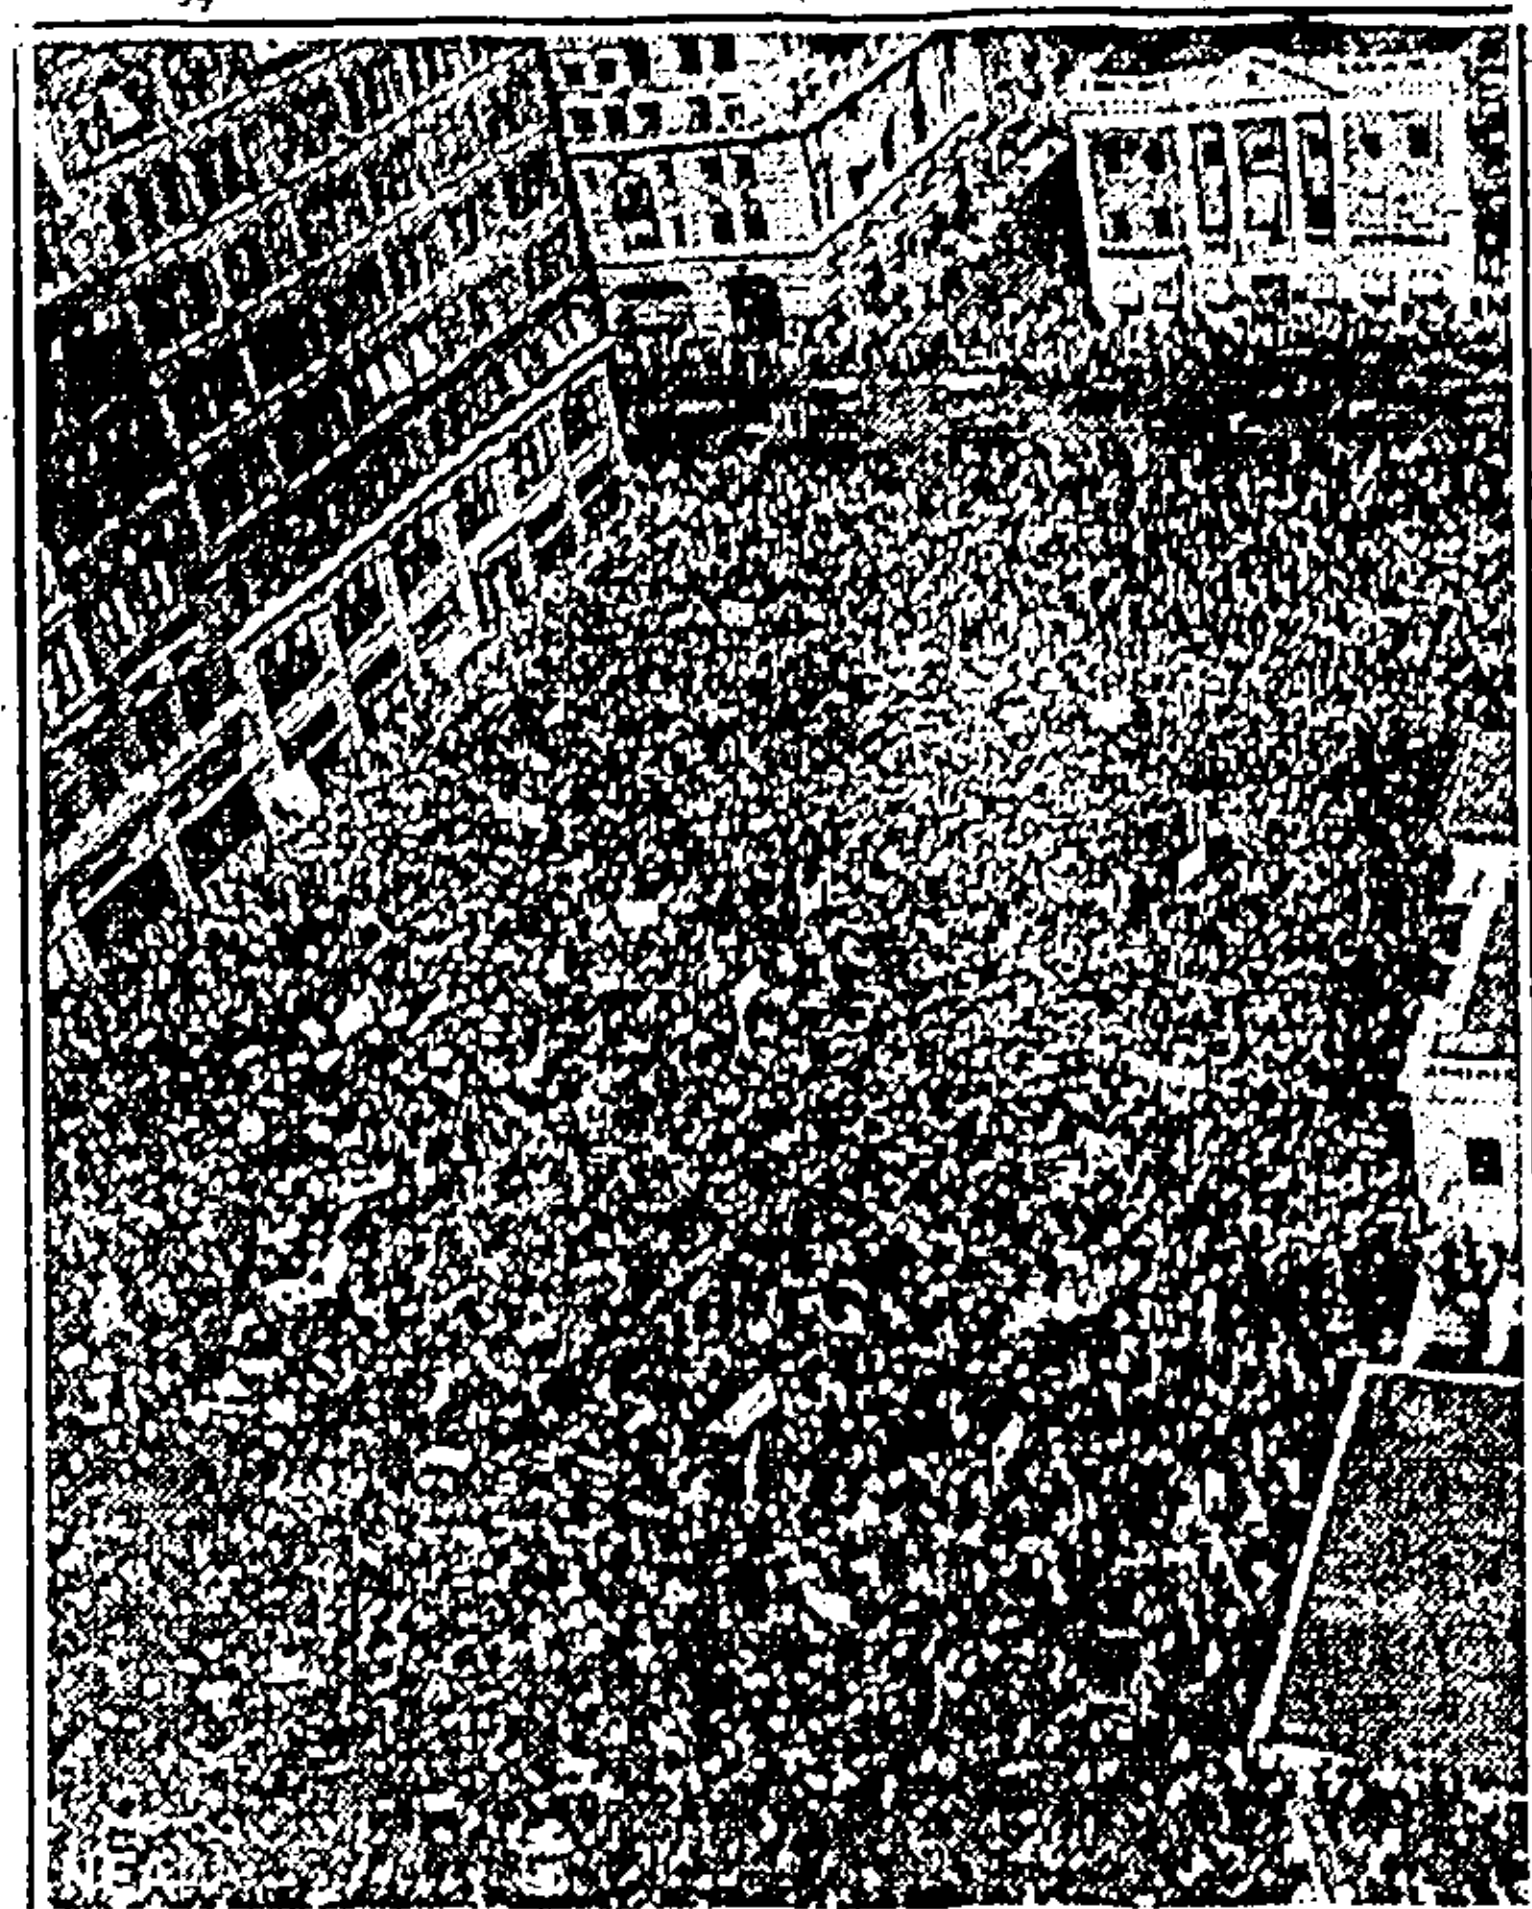

Only when his grief-stricken wife pleaded for his life did Paul Gorguloff seem touched by remorse. Here you see how the assassin sat with a hand to his bowed head.

The Russian merchant marine has its "gobs" and also its "gobettes." Women are allowed to serve as ordinary seamen, and are expected to qualify as third officers after two years at sea. One of the girl sailors here is shown lowering a ladder from a Soviet motor ship anchored in the Thames.

The socks are garish; the sandals cool. The priests themselves are Ananda, left, and Rahula, now in London to convert westerners to the teachings of Buddha.

Communists called it an "International Day of Struggle Against Imperialistic War." But the mass meeting shown above, in Union Square, New York, turned into a protest demonstration against the use of troops in expelling the bonus marchers from Washington.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By Laura Lou Brookman

Cherry Dixon, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan and then, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her. They are married and move into a cheap apartment. Cherry's struggles with housework are discouraging. Dick Shannon, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome Max Pearson, also of the News.

After several weeks Cherry's mother becomes seriously ill. The girl is called home and there is a reconciliation with her parents but pride will not allow her to accept financial aid from them. When Mrs. Dixon is stronger she and her husband leave for several months at the seashore.

Cherry and Dan are invited to a swimming party at a nearby resort. Dan is delayed and Cherry starts with Pearson. A storm overtakes them and while they are waiting for it to pass he tells her he loves her. They finally reach home but after that Cherry avoids Pearson.

Brenda Vail, magazine writer, comes to Wellington. Dan meets her and she asks him to collaborate with her on a play. Dan spends most of his evenings at Miss Vail's apartment. He and Cherry plan an evening together but a telephone call comes for Dan from Miss Vail.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Dan put down the telephone. "I'm sorry," he said. "Guess we'll have to see the Caseys some other night. That was Brenda calling. She's just had a new idea for the ending of the first act. Wants me to come over and rewrite what we did last night."

"Couldn't it wait until tomorrow?"

"Why, Cherry, I can't very well ask Brenda to wait. It's a big opportunity for me, you know. It's not every author who'd be willing to collaborate with a person entirely unknown. If she wants to work on the play tonight I think it's up to me to be there."

"I suppose you're right," Cherry said slowly. "You'll have to go."

Dan disappeared into the dressing room. A few minutes later he was back, pulling the ends of his tie through to make a neat knot. "Listen, Cherry," he said, "why don't you come along with me?"

"You mean go with you to Miss Vail's?"

"Sure. Maybe we'll be through early and we can pick up somebody at the office for a game of bridge. Or we might see a late movie."

Cherry shook her head. "No, I guess I'll stay at home."

"But why don't you come? You said you'd been in the house all day. It would be good for you to get out."

Cherry was not to be persuaded. "No," she said. "I'll stay at home."

she finally took the folds of yellow cloth over her arm and went upstairs to rap on the door of the Moreaus' apartment. Why should she feel jealous of Brenda Vail, this woman who was almost a stranger? What did it matter to Cherry if Dan spent so many evenings with Miss Vail? They were writing a play—the play that was to make Dan known to the world as a talented young author.

"I should be grateful," Cherry told herself. "She's doing what I can't for Dan—helping him make a name and a place for himself. It means everything for me, too. Money. The sort of life we've dreamed of. Happiness! Dan could never be happy with things as they are now. He's too ambitious. Oh, I should be glad Miss Vail came to Wellington and glad she's staying!"

Somehow, although she told herself all this several times, she could not quite believe it. Not a single thing had happened to plant in Cherry's mind the seed of jealousy and yet the restless, trouble-some thing was there.

Dan did not come home early that evening or the next. He told Cherry enthusiastically that at last the play was progressing. Two acts were almost completed. The third, which was to be the last act, was going to be difficult to handle. There was so much about the mechanics of writing for the stage of which he was ignorant. Brenda seemed to know, though. If the play really "clicked" the credit would be Brenda's.

"She's great!" he assured Cherry with glowing eyes. "Brenda knows life. She's as different from the sort of people you meet around here as day is from night."

It was on such occasions that the green-eyed goddess asserted herself. Cherry would remain silent to keep the bitter thoughts from her lips. Dan did not seem to notice how much of the time Cherry was silent.

There were evenings Dan did not spend working with Brenda. Occasionally Miss Vail had other engagements. Once some friends came, for her and drove her to a town 50 miles away. She spent two days there, returning to tell

There were other evenings when Dan had assignments or was busy at the office. He telephoned to Cherry on a night when he had been working late. It was almost 9 o'clock.

"Listen, honey," he said "Max and I are going to stop for you in 15 minutes. Can you be ready? It's a grand night and we're going to drive out to a new barbecue place on Stewart road. Better have a coat—it's cool out. Yes, we'll be there in 15 minutes. Twenty at the latest!"

The 20 minutes were not yet up when the roadster halted before the apartment house. Cherry came down the steps wearing a knitted sweater suit. It was brown and pulled close over her head was a scarlet beret. She looked unusually childish, unusually attractive.

Cherry called "Hello!" gayly and stepped into the roadster. She had not seen Max Pearson, since the night of their drive through the storm.

His greeting was friendly, casual. Dan wanted to know if Cherry was sure she would be warm enough and she said that she was. A moment more and they were off down the street.

The week had brought the first foretaste of autumn weather. There was a sharp nip in the air and once as they neared the limits of the city the odor of burning grass came to them. It must have been the first fall bonfire. Overhead the sky was almost black and the stars gleamed with chill, bright frigidities.

Cherry felt Dan's arm around her and snuggled close. She was glad that she had worn the woolly sweater suit. The cold wind struck against her cheeks and sent her blood back tingling. It was good to be riding through the night. It was good to have Dan at her side. Suddenly in the darkness Cherry's worries and problems slipped away.

Her fingers found Dan's hand, slipped into it. He was saying something she could not hear because of the wind. Cherry laughed and turned her head.

Dan repeated, "I said we hadn't driven out on this road since June. Remember?" Max brought us that night, too.

Cherry nodded. The memory of that spring night was still sweet. All the happiness she had known with Dan suddenly came crowding back. Oh, how could she have thought for one moment that anything could affect her love for Dan or his for her? Of course it was nonsense! She had been making herself unhappy over nothing.

did not even listen or hear Dan's reply. She was glad the conversation was about something at the office about which they would not expect her to express an opinion.

They were riding along a well-lighted highway. Presently, far ahead, an electric sign loomed up. "That's the place," Pearson told them. "Jo and I were out last week. Elegant fried chicken they serve. That is if you're in the mood for fried chicken—which I certainly am!"

"Chili for mine," Dan announced. "Haven't had a good bowl of hot chili for ages."

"Why do they call it a barbecue?" Cherry wanted to know. "It looks just like any other place to eat."

They had reached the lighted building. A dozen cars were parked by the road and there were more in an enclosed space at the other side of the structure. Pearson brought the roadster to a halt and the three stepped to the ground.

"There's a theory," Max explained. "That these places actually barbecue their meat—cook it whole, you know, over a bed of coals. As a matter of fact I think their kitchens are just about like any other restaurant's. You get good food and not much service—which suits most folks when they're driving."

They entered the long low building. Three men in white caps and aprons were serving customers who sat on high, swivel stools or lounged against the counter. There were two girls with escorts at one end of the room. The other customers were men.

One of the men behind the counter was making sandwiches. Another was filling cups of coffee for a tray that was evidently to be carried to customers waiting outside in a car.

Cherry and Dan and Max found places at the counter. They gave their orders and were served almost immediately. The hot coffee was strong and delicious, the chicken delicately tender. Though the portions were huge Cherry finished every crumb.

The talk drifted to Dan's play. "Putting a lot of time on it, I suppose," Pearson asked easily. "Every minute I can spare. You know I had no idea there was so much work to a play. It's not just writing the lines but thinking the thing through and planning how it's to go."

"How about the collaboration?"

After the drawings for the Davis Cup tennis matches in Paris, it's customary for everyone to drink a toast in wine to the success of the tournament. Here's Mrs. Willis Moody as she took part in the ceremony.

"I see. What do you think of the play, Cherry?"

The girl laughed. "I don't know a thing about it. Dan's keeping the whole thing a surprise until it's finished."

"Seems to me you might be rather a valuable critic," Pearson said.

Cherry had been avoiding his eyes but now she looked at him. There was nothing in his manner to suggest that impetuous night of the storm. Cherry was not quite comfortable in Max's presence and she glanced away quickly.

"Say, there's something I wish you'd do," Dan was saying. "It's darned lonesome for Cherry with me spending so much time working. Drop in to see her now and then, won't you Max? Cheer her up. Cherry doesn't see enough people or get out as often as she should."

Pearson's hesitation was almost imperceptible. He said, "Why—yes, of course. I'll be glad to come to see her. Any time that I'm welcome."

"Welcome?" Dan grinned. "Say, I guess you know you're welcome any time at our place. Isn't he, Cherry?"

The girl said "Certainly." Her eyes did not meet Pearson's again. (To be continued.)

MR. JUSTICE WOOD'S JUDGMENT IN CHENG CASE

jury at the outset the two issues, the fact of the incitement of Lau and the identity of the inciter. That the case was properly left to the jury on sufficient evidence is to my mind abundantly clear. As Lord Buckmaster has remarked (I quote again from Craig v Glasgow Corporation cited supra) "If a set of circumstances are actually consistent with a number of varying hypotheses no one can be selected as the one that is true."

The standard of proof which a jury in a criminal trial must require is described in Halsbury's "Laws of England" p.588, par.1190 "A jury must be satisfied... that the facts were such as to be inconsistent with any other rational conclusion than that he (i.e. the accused) was the guilty person."

The duty of the trial judge is to see to it that the verdict of the jury is given, after proper instructions in their functions, not in the field of supposition and conjecture, but of facts and inference. He may recognise that the jury have before them a choice of alternative inferences, all of which may be reasonable and he must explain to them the principles of selection which should guide them but he must not constitute himself as judge of facts in their place.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE.

The indictment submitted to this jury was in fact supported by cogent evidence. The jury in this case saw the witnesses and I have not seen them. But in these proceedings I have not been invaded by any doubt that the verdict of the jury may not have been both rationally, and to their mind, necessarily given.

In my opinion, the evidence of Zimmerman and Christie which we are asked to reject, was rightly admitted and the case for the Crown was properly left to the jury.

The verdict must in my view be allowed to stand.

CHIEF JUSTICE CONCURS.

The Chief Justice, concurring, said: I agree generally with the judgment which has just been delivered by my learned brother. I should like to add another reason why, in my opinion, the evidence objected to is admissible. Perhaps this additional reason is only re-statement, from a different point of view, of the reasons already given.

Whether one fact tends to prove another is, speaking broadly, a matter of common mental processes. As it is put in Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. 13, at page 439, in paragraph 611, "in the vast majority of cases the law will accept as evidence those matters which are indicated as such by the ordinary course of human experience."

LEGAL EVIDENCE. Some matters which ordinary reasoning would admit are definitely excluded by the rules of legal evidence for various sound reasons e.g. involuntary confessions because of the great risk that they may not be true, bad character because of its dangerousness towards proving the singular acts alleged, and hearsay because it is not on oath, cannot be tested by cross-examination, opens a door to fraud, is less reliable by reason of its being second-hand and would tend to protract legal inquiries and to encourage the substitution of weaker for stronger evidence.

INTELLIGENT REASONING. I think however, that if ordinary intelligent reasoning would accept a fact as probative of the main fact alleged, as it undoubtedly would accept the evidence objected to in the present case, some such definite rule of legal exclusion must be found applicable before it can be shut out.

I think that no such rule is applicable here. There mere fact that evidence discloses another offence does not alone exclude it. Here the evidence was not offered to show that the accused was of a murderous disposition generally and likely to commit another murder, and it did not in any way tend to suggest that he was.

CLEARLY ADMISSIBLE.

It was offered simply in order to prove that he was the person who employed Lau to procure the murder and in my opinion it was clearly admissible for that purpose.

I think that the conviction should be affirmed.

LEAVE TO APPEAL.

Mr. Lim:—In view of the fact that we shall be applying for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council, it would help us greatly if your Lordships would note this case as one of general and public importance.

Mr. Lim cited one authority to support his request.

The Chief Justice refused the application, adding:—"The prisoner will be brought up for sentence on Wednesday, the 14th at 10 a.m."

GOLD AND STERLING

The question of whether, and if so, when, Britain should return to the gold standard is still forming the subject of controversy at Home, but the general impression appears to be that no decision ought to be taken at present about the future value of sterling in terms either of gold or dollars. This is based on the point that no-one yet knows, and cannot know, what the future value of either gold or dollars in terms of goods is likely to be. One authority thinks that Britain can reasonably seek to manage the American exchange so as to prevent unnecessary short-term fluctuations and work in with the American authorities in bringing "reflation" about, holding that such a policy will be mutually beneficial. But he feels that no long-term decisions about the value of sterling should be made for some time to come.

There is every possibility that in the course of Britain's experiments in short-term currency management a method will be hit upon which will make permanently unnecessary any return to the gold standard in the old sense. In the past, the strongest part of the case in favour of the gold standard was based on the argument that, in the interests of trade, the relative values of national currencies ought to be nearly enough known in advance to enable buyers and sellers of goods across national frontiers to make reliable estimates of their receipts in relation to their costs of production. This need, however, could be met sufficiently for most purposes if the short-term fluctuations of the exchanges could be kept within narrow limits, as they were under the gold standard. A similar policy of short-term stabilisation of the exchanges, combined with the power to vary them in accordance with changes in long-term forces, could be pursued—as it will presumably be pursued now with the aid of the Exchange Equalisation Fund—without returning to the gold standard at all. One economist thinks that is to encourage and develop the tendency towards the creation of a "sterling area" of countries which aim at keeping their national currencies stable in terms of sterling instead of gold. In this case, too, what matters in the interests of trade is far more short-term than long-term stability of the exchanges, and there is no reason why they should not keep the power to make long-term adjustments in the sterling value of their currencies, while pegging the exchanges over short periods by the familiar method of holding sterling balances in London, just as Britain now holds dollar balances in New York. It is true that long-term stability matters in respect of international debts; but existing long-term debts will clearly have to be readjusted, and new debt arrangements could be made to fit in with the new conditions.

The "sterling area" thus envisaged would include as many Empire countries as are prepared to come in, but would be open equally to other countries, such as the Scandinavians, the South Americans, or some of them, and perhaps the countries of Central Europe which are now on the verge of currency depreciation. Such a "sterling area" would not be a purely British concern. It would become the concern of all the countries included within the group, and some form of consultation between the monetary authorities of these countries would have to be devised—perhaps, as the forerunner of the long-awaited international authority for managing the monetary affairs of the whole world.

The Split in the Labour Party

The breach between the Independent Labour Party and the official Labour Party was long in coming—so long, in fact, that the final plunge was little more than a formality. The two wings of the party have been at variance for years. Outward unity has by no means concealed the inward disorder. Both sections will breathe more freely now that neither has to maintain appearances. In the past, the I.L.P. provided the driving force of the Labour movement. Its ranks were mainly recruited from the intellectuals to whom Socialism appealed as an attractive philosophy. The other, or Trade Union wing, consisted of those whose socialistic theories were strongly tinged with the practical determination to raise the standard of living of the industrial worker. While the Labour movement was still in its teens the two sections worked together fairly comfortably in double harness. Indeed they made such remarkable progress that by 1924 they actually found themselves in office. From that time, however, dates a steady trickle away from doctrinaire to, and even beyond, the orthodox Labour tenets. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Viscount Snowden, for instance, both started their political careers in the I. L. P. They are now as much to the right of the main body as they were formerly to the left. Other one-time leaders of the I.L.P., like Mr. J. R. Clynes, the former Home Secretary, are now pillars of Labour orthodoxy. The latest decision has pushed others in the same direction, notably Mr. E. F. Wise, the English economic adviser of the Soviet Co-operative Societies. The I. L. P. group, after the minority which refuses to cut adrift from the Labour Party has gone, is neither very large nor very influential. It includes a few well-known parliamentarians like Mr. James Maxton and Mr. Frederick W. Jowett, Commissioner of Works in the first Labour Government. But they have at most 20,000 enrolled supporters—a mere fraction of their erstwhile comrades on the right, and actually fewer perhaps than the Communists on their left. It is indeed difficult to see how the tattered remnant of the I. L. P. is going to maintain an independent position between its two neighbours. The left cannot fail to attract the hares, and the

CORRESPONDENCE.

Scrap Brass.

(To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.)

Sir,—Some days ago, you reported the case of a hawk's being fined for having purchased scrap brass at a figure much below market price. In an age that accepts buy-in-the-cheapest-market as an economic principle, it seems to me that a higher standard of morality was expected for this hawk than that to which most of us conform.

I have myself heard an Inspector of Police say, after securing, through haggling, an article in "Paddy's Market" at a ridiculous cheap price, "Of course, the blighter must have stolen it to sell it so cheaply," though I did not notice that he was too keen on prosecuting. But then, it wasn't scrap brass.—Yours, etc., SAUCE FOR THE GANDER.

Indicate that the process has already begun. Meanwhile, it seems obvious that the main body of Labour will be strengthened by the disappearance of an unfriendly ally who was really more

WHAT DO YOU BELIEVE?

By A CITY MINISTER

I THINK it is undoubted that people are asking—especially thoughtful young people—that the Church should restate its creed in definite fashion what its creed is, and what intellectual and moral demands it makes upon those who join its fellowship.

This statement of creed, it is said, should be given in clear, simple, untechnical and unequivocal terms—in other words, the Church's creed should be both simplified and modernised. The question is—Can this be done with gain or, at least, without serious loss?

One must remember, of course, that there is such a thing as a "false simplicity." No one, for instance, can make Einstein's Theory of Relativity either simple or easy. In the same way, no one can make a doctrine of Divine Providence or a theory of the Atonement a mere matter for babes. In the last resort, anyone joining the Church is expected to think as well as believe! To talk of making abstract thinking about God, the universe, and the human soul either "simple" or "easy" is merely nonsense. In other words, one cannot simplify big things beyond a certain point without altering their quality.

Further, I hope that this modern cry for a simplified creed does not spring from any foolish objection to a creed as such. A creed is only to a creed as such. A creed is only arranged, ordered, and codified thinking. If we have any thinking at all, we must define and delimit it. Some people seem to rear up against creeds in religion while they demand them imperiously everywhere else—in politics, philosophy, economics, and ethics. A politician, for instance, would not have a dog's chance with his constituency unless he had a detailed programme, or what we call "a platform." But what is a creed except the Church's programme and platform? A Church without a definite creed of some kind would not be an organism, but only a kind of chaos!

The Need for Change.

With this said, I agree that a modernised and simplified creed is fully justified. The present creeds of the Church represent the mental thinking of the fourth or fifth centuries—and this is the twentieth. Besides, in any case, a creed ought to be fluid, if the promise of the Holy Spirit is true that He will lead us into all truth. The argument for change or revival may be briefly summarised as follows:—

1. Our present creeds are diverse and even contradictory in their definitions and statements.
2. They are antiquated in form and expression as well as in thought.
3. They are naturally coloured by the philosophical terms and ideas of their own day, now largely discarded.
4. They are too long, too defined, and generally too controversial.
5. They were designed, unfortunately, not to make a simple statement to include and excommunicate doubtful people. Indeed, the saddest thing in Church history is that our creeds and confessions were evolved in some desperate crisis of contention as much to exclude and denounce antagonists as to include all the faithful who owed a sincere loyalty to Jesus.

Most ministers of my acquaintance would gladly welcome a short, modern, comprehensive statement of Christian belief—one that would include the "essentials" of the faith and yet would grant all needed latitude for legitimate and natural differences of thinking. They believe that the finest unity is not "uniformity" but unity in variety, unity with difference. The only question is—What are the essentials?

Back to Apostolic Simplicity.

In the early apostolic days, a very simple test or creed was demanded from those who joined the Christian fellowship. That creed is reflected in various passages in the New Testament. It ran something like this:—"Do you own Jesus as Lord?" Only in later days, with the rise of various heresies and the impact of pagan philosophy, was this simple formula defined, amplified, and theologised.

Personally, I should have no hesitation in going back to that simple creed. Christ's only test to Peter was, "Lovest thou Me?" Jesus did not ask a disciple to have fixed and precise notions about Him before He asked the man to follow Him. Some people may reply that such a simple test would leave too much room for radical and crucial differences within the communion. But I submit two things:—

1. That there ought to be room for the exercise of Christian intelligence on all intellectual concerns where difference is natural.
2. If a man loves Jesus, follows Him, and owns Him as Lord, I have no business to say that he has no part in Him, even if he does not regard Jesus exactly as I do.

It is true that our Lord asked, "Whom say ye that I am?" but He did not make the answer to that question a test of orthodoxy. Discipleship with Jesus was rather a kind of spiritual life than a kind of intellectual uniformity!

THIS DIVORCE RACKET

By Edward Kelly, Private Detective.
WE are here to tell the world that when there's any divorcing to be done in Hongkong, we are right on the spot to do it.

We know all there is to know about the fallibility of human beings. We had seven wives in Queensland—all barmaids—and there is nothing we don't know about divorce.

We know all about this matrimonial jurisdiction, too. Our last wife was one of those indulgent kind, who let us do exactly as she wished. We didn't know what happiness was until we were married. Then it was too late.

When we were divorced from our last wife, we swore off wives ever since.

We remember when we were divorced. We watched our wife and her co-re for over an hour. We remember it quite well. At 11.27 p.m.—Never mind.

We have many friends who are married, but not seriously. Work this out:—A lady of means went three times around the world looking for her ideal man. One day she met him in Hongkong. He was a friend of ours, and his name was Bill Yous. Now she's Mrs. Bill Yous.

Work out, to the nearest decimal, what chance Mr. Bill Yous had.

who was in the adjoining room, staring at her with arms folded.

MEETING WITH ZIMMERN.

On the 5th March (I now deal with Zimmern's evidence), the accused met Zimmern for the first time. He engaged Zimmern at a salary as his bodyguard. On the 6th March the accused took Zimmern and a party of guests to the Repulse Bay Hotel. Fung and Lai Ming-fay were together at the hotel. The accused gave Zimmern money and asked him to go to a separate table so that they might not be observed together by Fung and the girl.

On or about the 12th March the accused narrated to Zimmern the story of his relations with Lai Ming-fay and expressed his annoyance at her desertion. On or about the 16 March at 2 a.m. the accused, shedding tears of distress, asked Zimmern to give him a knife so that he might go to the Nathan Hotel and look for Fung. On or about the 17th March in the afternoon the accused told Zimmern that he had visited the Nathan Hotel and by use of a faked telephone call had brought Fung and the girl from their room and had said to them "I warn you, you beware."

"OTHER MEN."

Zimmern said "Why not leave it in my hands?" and the accused replied that he would "see about it."

On 20th March the accused told Zimmern that the two men had failed to follow his instructions.

NIGHT OF MURDER.

On 24th March from 4.30 p.m. to 8.40 p.m. Zimmern and the accused were together at several places. At 8.30 p.m. or 8.40 p.m. the accused said he was going to the telephone, went away and came back after a few minutes. He then said that he would go back to his abode, 50 Village Road, Happy Valley, in order to get money. The accused drove Zimmern and another person in his car to Happy Valley. On passing the hospital to which the deceased had been taken and outside which a crowd had gathered he remarked to Zimmern that there must have been a motor-car accident. On arrival the accused went into his house and Zimmern and his friend remained outside in his car. The accused, on his return, seemed afraid for his own safety. He drove them back to the town and the friend got out en route and left them.

VENGEANCE THREAT.

The accused afterwards said to Zimmern "George Fung is dead. Lai Ming-fay has rung up my house and swears vengeance against me." Further the accused told Zimmern to keep quiet otherwise he might be killed in the same way. Zimmern and the accused remained together until 5 a.m. the following morning. The accused then gave Zimmern $50 and told him to go to Canton which he did.

Lau, the chauffeur of the accused, cannot be found in the Colony. It was stated in evidence by Christie and Zimmern that the accused on the morning of 21st March in Kowloon on the way to the ferry said to Christie: "I have a trusted chauffeur who is under an obligation to me." This remark formed part of a conversation to which I must refer later. Lai Ming-fay has stated that so far as she knew Fung had no enemies other than the accused.

EVIDENCE CHALLENGED.

The Crown has tendered also other evidence to which objection has been taken the same objection having been taken already at the trial. This evidence was received and submitted to the jury in support of the indictment. It was derived from the witnesses Zimmern and Christie and falls into two sections. In the first section it was stated that on the 20th March the accused invited Zimmern to bring his friends to dinner. The accused met Zimmern, Christie and two other men that evening at the Yee Fong Chuan restaurant. At this restaurant the accused invited Zimmern and his party to go with him to the Nathan Hotel and there and then to assault Fung. They went to the Nathan Hotel arriving on the 21st March between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. The avowed object of the accused at this time was to "save his own face by smacking Fung's face." Fung did not leave his room and the assault did not take place. Conversation then ensued between the accused, Zimmern and Christie at the Nathan Hotel.

ALLEGED PLOT.

that on the 21st March in the early hours at the Nathan Hotel, Kowloon, after the failure of the scheme to assault Fung in the hotel the accused offered $10,000 to Christie if he would kill Fung; that Christie, Zimmern, and the accused remained together during the day and discussed the possibility of killing Fung either by shooting or by the use of potassium cyanide (the accused expressing his preference for shooting); that Christie purchased a hypodermic syringe and some potassium cyanide with money furnished by the accused and handed the same to the accused; that the accused encouraged Christie to carry out his proposal by the promise of his chauffeur's assistance, and also by alleging that being under 21 years of age Christie was not liable to capital punishment; Christie, Zimmern and the accused consulted one firm of solicitors, Messrs Lo and Lo, to obtain, if they could, a confirmation of this opinion of the law; and that Zimmern and Christie in the invitation of the accused and with money provided by him obtained two other solicitors' opinions.

DEATH OF CHICKEN.

Further that on the 22nd March the accused told Zimmern and Christie that he had experimented upon a chicken with the hypodermic syringe and poison and that it had died but that he had damaged the syringe; also that at the request of the accused Christie purchased a second syringe on his behalf which he delivered to the accused. Further that on the 25th March, before 5 a.m., the accused, who had given Zimmern $50 at the same time gave Zimmern a further $10 to give to Christie. Firstly, that on the evening of the 24th March, Zimmern produced to the accused the receipt given by Messrs Lo and Lo, solicitors, for their professional fee and that the accused destroyed this paper.

Zimmern and Christie have disclaimed any intention of killing Fung and have said their object was to obtain by fraud, the money of the accused.

The evidence was not in fact analysed by Counsel before us in the above detail, but I am satisfied that I have set it out with sufficient accuracy for the present purpose.

NOT A LINK.

It is to be observed that the evidence to which objection is taken primarily discloses a criminal incitement by the accused which forms no part of the particulars given in the indictment itself. The evidence related to an incitement of different persons from those named in the indictment and also an incitement to use an alternative to the use of firearms, means different from those in fact used by the persons named in the indictment. It describes also an incitement which was never effectual as the witnesses themselves at no time intended to kill Fung. Moreover, it is not a link in the chain of evidence alleged to have led from the criminal intent of the accused through the channel of his chauffeur Lau's activities to the murder of Fung. The story told in this evidence discloses crimes other than the crime charged, which may be separately designated.

STANDARD OF ADMISSIBILITY.

The relevance of this evidence to this prosecution has been questioned before us for these reasons and the admissibility has been challenged on the plea that it has been used to prove complicity in the alleged offence showing complicity in a distinct but similar offence. It is salutary here to recall the advice of Viscount Birkenhead (which is to be found in "Rutherford v Richardson", 1923, A.C. 5) who there said "The issues pronounced upon by Courts in criminal matters are attended with such decisive consequences that the adoption in matters of evidence of a standard of admissibility which is so cautious as to be meticulous may not be defended but is in fact essential".

RIGHTLY RECEIVED.

In my opinion the evidence was rightly received. I have reached the conclusion that the contention by the defence that the evidence to which objection is taken forms a different transaction than that under consideration cannot be sustained. Evidence has to be received not merely in accordance with the standard of its appropriateness to prove a conclusion for which the prosecution contends; but also because whatever its appropriateness in the adjudication, it in fact belongs to the story to which the attention of the Court is drawn. Such evidence is admitted, in the language of legal textbooks, as part of the res gestae.

LORD TOMLIN'S VIEW.

Lord Tomlin (in "Homes v. New-man" 1931 2 Ch. at p. 120) who has remarked "What is meant by saying that an act is admissible because it is part of the res gestae has never, so far as I am aware, been explained in a satisfactory manner. I suspect it of being a phrase adopted to provide a respectable legal cloak for a variety of cases to which no formula of precision can be applied."

The term nevertheless affords an efficient classification of material. It is fundamental in the law of evidence.

STEPHEN'S DIGEST.

The authoritative statement of the law is to be found in Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence 7th Edition (1906) Article 3 which is as follows—

"Relevancy of facts forming part of the same transaction as the facts in issue. A transaction is a group of facts so connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name as a crime. Every fact which is part of the same transaction as the facts in issue, although it may not be actually in issue, is relevant."

He adds—

"Whether any particular fact is or is not part of the same transaction, is a question of law upon which no principle has been stated by authority and on which single judges have given different decisions."

(See also 13 Halsbury's "Laws of England" p. 420 par. 585). In less technical language a similar statement of the law is to be found in 9 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 380 par. 740—

"The evidence must be confined to the facts which constitute or are connected with the offence charged and proof cannot generally be given of other facts which have no connection with the offence. However, there are other facts which are so intimately mixed up with the facts which constitute the offence as to form one transaction proof may be given of such other facts. All the details of the alleged criminal transaction are relevant to the case for the prosecution as being part of the res gestae and should be proved."

The learned author in 13 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 437, par. 609 also states—

"In testifying to the matters in issue, a witness must state the facts in their fullest possible form, but with a reasonable fulness of detail and circumstances."

HISTORY OF CRIME.

A judicial statement of the doctrine is contained in the judgment of Kennedy J. delivered in the report of R. v. Bond (C.C.R.L. 1906 2 K.B. at p. 400)—

"The general rule" (i.e. the rule excluding prior criminal conduct of the accused from the evidence) "cannot be applied where the facts which constitute distinct offences, are so connected with the facts of the case which are the subject of the indictment, as to form part of one chain of relevant circumstances, and so that they are relevant in the presentment of the case before the jury without the evidence being thereby rendered unintelligible."

NARROW FIELD.

"Such prior acts formed in point of history and circumstantial connection, inseparable parts of the transaction which the jury had to investigate. . . . The relations of the murdered man . . . to his assailant, so far as they may reasonably be treated as explanatory of the conduct of the accused as charged in the indictment, are properly admitted to proof as integral parts of the history of the alleged crime for which the accused is on his trial."

I should like to have suggested to the learned judge in this connection that the use of the word "unintelligible" here narrows the field too rigidly and that the word "incomplete" might take its place. The prosecution has a right to tell "the whole story of the prisoner's doings" (Russell "Crimes" 7th Edition p. 2101) or "everything that may be fairly considered an incident of the event" (Taylor "Evidence" 11th Edition para. 583).

"SOMEBODY KNOWS."

I have found a striking illustration in the prologue of a modern play—John van Druten's "Somebody Knows" where a character in discussion with a novelist is made made to say "It's like one of these novels. I don't mean the kind you write, but the sort where the author says 'He came in, closed the door and faced her' and that's the end of the chapter and the next one begins 'Ten days later. . . . I always want to say 'but you're cheating. You've got to tell us what happened.'"

The demarcation of any transaction by the judge is perhaps a point on which little help may be derived from precedent. To quote a dictum of Earl Loreburn in "Kerr v. Lendrum v. Ayr Steam Shipping Company Limited" 1915 A.C. at p. 223, the learned judge there remarked "Nor am I impressed by arguments proceeding upon a comparison between the facts of one case and the facts of another. Precedents are valuable and authoritative when they lay down a principle. They are otherwise merely illustrations of the way in which judges look at facts. Different judges look at facts also a comment of Lord Finlay (quoted from "Craig v Glasgow Corporation" 1919 S.C. (H.L.) 1: "No inquiry is more idle than one which is devoted to seeing how nearly the facts of cases come together. The use of cases is for the proposition of law they contain." The remark already cited from Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence may be true, but it casts no reflection on judges. Each case has its own features.

SOME EXAMPLES.

Certain cases stand out as clear examples. In "Reg. v. Rhodes" (1899) 1 Q.B. 77 the prisoner was indicted for obtaining eggs by a false pretence. The false pretence was contained in a newspaper advertisement from which other frauds followed. Evidence of those other frauds was admitted not as relevant to any particular issue in the case but as forming part of one fraudulent transaction, namely a bogus business.

On the other hand, in "R. v. Ellis" 1910 K.B. 746 the charge was for defrauding "A" by false pretences in connexion with a sale of porcelain. Reference was made in cross-examination of the accused to other and different false pretences by which it was alleged the accused had fraudulently obtained money on other occasions but also from "A" and also on a sale of porcelain. It was held that the question was asked in breach of the Criminal Evidence Act 1898 S. 1 S.S. (f).

In other words, it was held that this was a series of separate fraudulent transactions and not one fraudulent business. "There was no systematic course of swindling by the same methods" (Bray J. at p. 761) (see also "R. v. Fisher" 1910 1 K.B. 149).

To apply the doctrine to the present case, the transaction under inquiry is the murder of George Fung. The story of the transaction commenced from the desertion of the accused by Lai Ming-fay and culminated in the death of George Fung. The conduct of the accused during this interval of time is an incident of this event.

NATURAL QUERY.

Any person listening to the narrative told by the witnesses so far as the evidence has been received without question, would naturally inquire "Between the abortive attempt by his chauffeur's agents on the 19th March to murder Fung and their successful attempt with his chauffeur's support upon the 24th March, what was the accused himself doing in the meantime?"

Without this evidence, the story, to use the word, I have suggested, would be "incomplete." The evidence comes under Stephen's classification "Evidence deemed to be relevant to the issue."

It is one piece of the puzzle which the jury are entitled to handle and fit into the whole to the best of their ability.

It is not necessary to emphasize the fact that the prosecution is not debarred from telling the whole story of the prisoner's doings merely because it excludes other of his criminal acts not specially charged in the indictment. (Russell "Crimes" 7th Edition p. 2011 cited above). The same remark applies to all evidence adduced whether strictly relevant or merely deemed to be so.

However, the argument for the Crown before us has been directed to showing the strict relevancy of this evidence to the main issue, whether the facts are to be included in one transaction with the charge laid in the indictment, or not, and in my view, this contention will also prevail.

FOUR POINTS.

This is a case of criminal homicide. The Crown alleges that the accused through Lau murdered Fung. The facts in issue which the Crown must prove are four in number:

1. That Fung was murdered.
2. That he was murdered through Lau.
3. That Lau himself had a principal.
4. That this principal was the accused.

The first and second of these facts are not here in doubt. That Lau himself is the agent of someone else has been shown by the absence of any motive of his own and by his control of large sums of money for the purpose of his crime. The question arising here is upon the fourth issue. The problem has become one of identity—of the identity of the accused with a criminal known alibi to exist.

To prove the identity with the actual perpetrator of a person sought to be implicated in criminal homicide, proof of his hostility toward the deceased is relevant evidence. The evidence here of Zimmern and Christie to which objection has been taken is such matter, and is admissible.

LONDON TEAMS' GOOD DAY

BRILLIANT GOAL BY JAMES

RANGERS' FIGHT WITH CELTIC

London, Sept. 10.
Hugh Gallacher scored one of the most brilliant goals of his career for Chelsea at Stamford Bridge when Sheffield United were beaten by three clear goals.

The Arsenal triumphed over Manchester City at Moss Side by three goals to two, the jugglery of Alex. James electrifying the crowd of 40,000.

West Ham United are in a sorry plight and were handicapped by R. Dixon being injured.

Tottenham Hotspurs ran away with their match against Manchester United at High Road, winning by six goals to one.

An argumentative game between Luton and Coventry at Kenilworth Road saw vigorous play with the former winning by four goals to one.

Aldershot, the Third Division babes, are happy over their victory against Gillingham at Victoria Road where they won by three clear goals.

DON'T WISH

Dreams translated into actions
became practical realities

The trouble with many people is that they have a wishbone where their backbone ought to be!

They see opportunities yet fail to grasp them.
They know people who are investing wisely and reaping substantial harvests—yet they only dream
—just wish and wait for "something to turn up."

To-day offers greater opportunities than ever before! It is to those people who wish for something better that this message is addressed.

ACT NOW. Sums of $100 or more, invested in safe China Realty Company 8% interest earning debentures can be the means of starting you on the road to financial independence. An assured
"Second Income" will be yours right from the start.

You will be surprised how easily it is to accumulate a reserve fund that is always available in cash, and one that is always earning at least 8% interest for you once you make a start. Don't just wish for prosperity—reach out and seize it!

As our balance sheet shows quite plainly the proceeds from the sale of our debentures is not used for the purchase of real estate, as we are not speculators, but for investment in first class land pledged as security, but also by the entire mortgages amply secured not only by the value of assets of this prosperous company. An analysis shows that every debenture has behind it assets equal to almost three times its face value.

During 1931 we negotiated mortgages amounting to $19,194,868 on property valued at over $35,550,000. It will be thus seen that the amount loaned was less than 54 per cent. of the market value of the property, leaving a margin of security wide enough to cover the most remote contingency.

DURING THE PAST 20 YEARS, WE HAVE NEGOTIATED MORTGAGES AMOUNTING TO MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED MILLION TAELS
AND SO ACCURATE HAS OUR JUDGMENT
BEEN, THAT NOT ONE CENT OF PRINCIPAL
OR INTEREST HAS EVER BEEN LOST!

CHINA REALTY COMPANY 8% DEBENTURES 8% INTEREST VS 6% INTEREST MEANS ONE THIRD MORE INCOME

Market reports indicate that NOW is a favourable time to acquire China Realty
Co. 8% debentures—call in and discuss this with us at the first opportunity

Secretary,
China Realty Company,
70, Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

Dear Sir,

Please send me without obligation on my part a copy of your last balance sheet and other information regarding your 8% debenture issue.

A REVOLVER DUEL

DISTRICT WATCHMAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

A stand up duel with revolvers at close range between two district watchmen attached to the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs and detailed for duty in the Western District culminated in both men being removed to hospital during the early hours of yesterday morning. One had a bullet wound in the abdomen and died during the afternoon.

The occurrence created a sensation in the district shortly after mid-night when shots were fired in rapid succession in Des Voeux Road, at its junction with Western Street, immediately below the No. 7 Police Station.

Police officers from the Station immediately rushed out and found one of the two men lying gravely wounded.

The Police are pursuing their enquiries into the affair and up to the present little is known of what actually took place between the two men. It was whilst they were changing duties that the shooting started.

Lai Chuen, District Watchman No. 60, had been on patrol in the Western District from 6 p.m. on Saturday and was due to be relieved at mid-night by Shiu Kwan-chiu, District Watchman No. 99, who was to patrol the district until 6 a.m. when he was to be relieved.

The two men met just below the West Point Police Station at mid-night and appeared to have become involved in a quarrel. The exact nature of the argument is not known but the two men lost their tempers and revolvers were drawn. For the next few moments the two watchmen exchanged shots with each other both firing practically simultaneously although it is not known which of the two was the first to draw.

One man discharged six shots from his revolver while the other fired four rounds. Lai Chuen, the man coming off duty, was wounded in the abdomen, as well as in the right arm, and instantly collapsed when he received the more serious wound. Shiu Kwan-chiu was not seriously hurt, receiving a shot in the left elbow.

When the two men were removed to hospital by the Police of the West Point Police Station it was found that Lai Chuen was in a critical condition and dying. Operations were taken later in the morning. He died shortly after 3 p.m.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, yesterday. The Golden Text was—"Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed." (John 6: 27).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible—"Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and said unto them, Peace be unto you. And when he had so said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord." (John 20: 19, 20).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy,—"To show that the substance of himself was Spirit and the body no more perfect because of death and no less material until the ascension (his further spiritual exaltation), Jesus waited until mortal or fleshly sense had relinquished the belief of substance-matter, and spiritual sense had quenched all earthly yearnings. Thus he found the eternal Ego, and proved that he and the Father were inseparable." (p. 100).

London, Sept. 11. The Lancashire and Cheshire Miners' Federation has decided to strike on September 12.

Medals, books, and free passes were the prizes presented to winners in the King's Theatre's recent essay competition. The winning essay has already been published.

The Hon. Mr. S. W. Tso presented the prizes on Saturday, and in addressing the gathering at the function he said:

When the management of the King's Theatre asked me to come here to-day and distribute the prizes to the winners of the Essay Competition instituted by the management, it gave me much pleasure in accepting the invitation to perform this interesting function. The competition was opened to students of all schools in the Colony and six prizes were offered for the best 6 Essays on the cooling system of this Theatre.

Intending competitors were given the opportunity of coming here to study and examine into the principle of the system and every detail of its mechanism was thoroughly explained and demonstrated to them. To the un-initiated many would think that no fresh air comes into the room and that the same air is being used over and over again. But as a matter of fact a constant flow of fresh air enters this room through the in-take fans the vitiated air being drawn out of it by powerful exhaust-fans, thus, keeping the air here pure and sweet.

The competition had the advantage of learning this system before they write and their essays were written therefore with a practical knowledge of the subject which no school in a class room can impart.

The six best essays were selected by Judges upon the merits of their English composition and the correctness of their technical description of the cooling plants. The management therefore tenders its hearty thanks to the Judges, the Editors of the Hongkong Telegraph and Hongkong Daily Press who adjudged the English part of the composition and Mr. Macfarlane of the Dairy Farm & Cold Storage Co., who adjudged the technical part of the composition.

The competition has a great educational value and I congratulate the management for having promoted it.

Ladies and gentlemen, I know you are anxious to see the beautiful picture that follows, and I will not therefore keep you any longer. I will now announce the names of the winners and ask them to come up and receive their prizes. (Applause).

YOUTHS SENTENCED.

FOUR AND HALF MONTHS FOR STEALING

Sentences totalling four and a half months were imposed on two lads of 17 and 13 at the Kowloon Magistracy before Mr. Fraser on Saturday morning, when they were charged with five larcenies extending over a period of about a month.

Prosecuting for the Police, Detective Sergeant Lamont said the defendants were regular thieves. They would wait in doorways of houses in Mongkok early in the morning, and whenever the opportunity occurred, they would dart in and take away the first thing they could lay hands on.

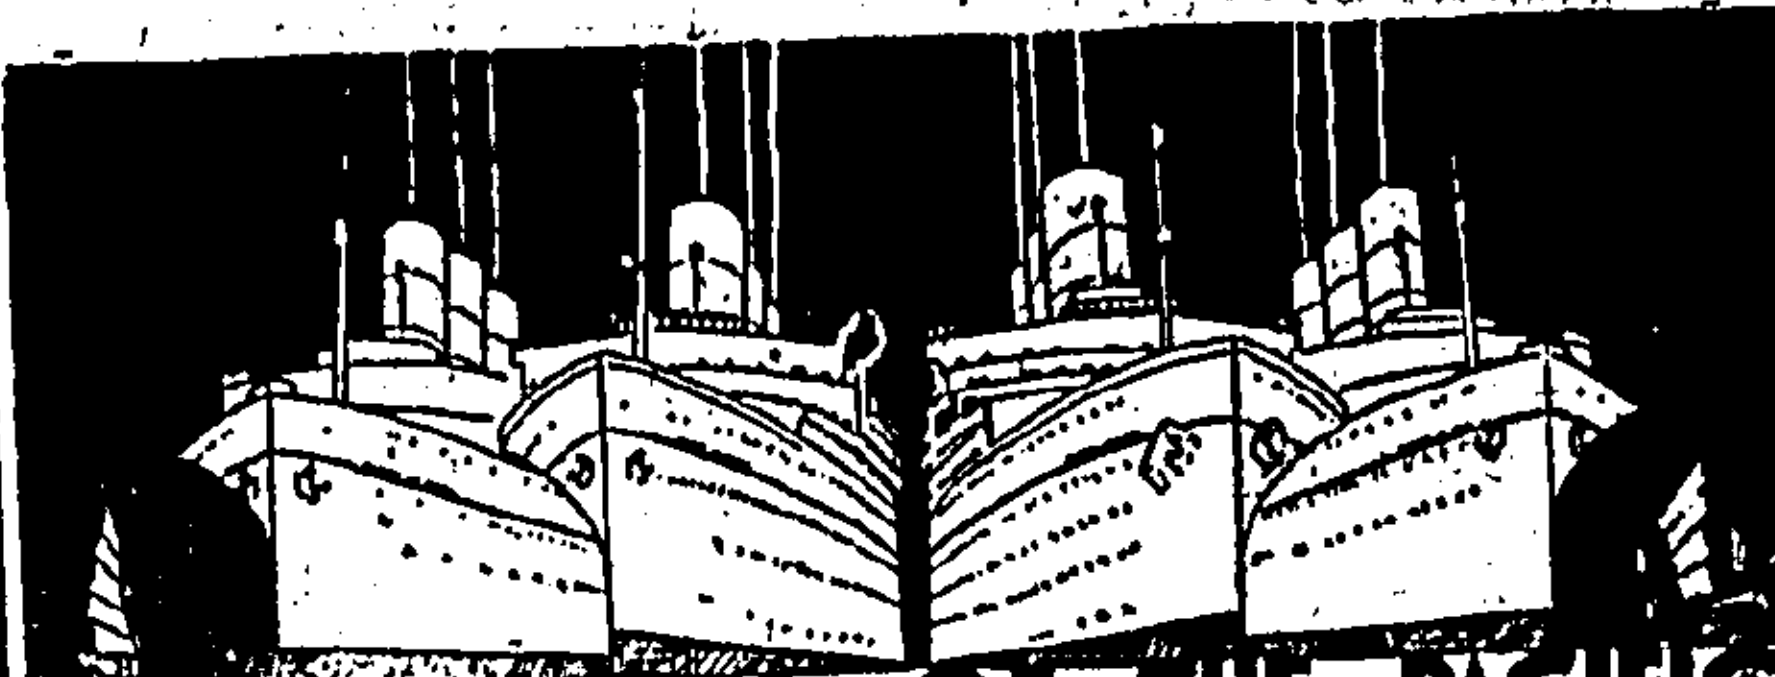

Both lads had been convicted for larcenies before, went on Sergeant Lamont. As a matter of fact, the younger one was perhaps the worse of the two. He had been convicted five times and had been given several chances to reform. The last occasion he was convicted he was sent to the Police Boys' Club, but ran away on the same day.

In passing sentence, his Worship said he would very much like to send him to an educational institution, but he did not think that would do any good.

A third lad who was on the same charges was remanded, his Worship ordering him to be sent to the S.C.A. for inquiries, as his record was not as bad as that of the others.

WOMAN IN CASE

WATCHMEN'S DUEL AT WEST POINT

SHOOTING AFTER STRUGGLE

Investigations have amplified the sensational features contained in the midnight shooting drama at West Point, when two district watchmen engaged in a revolver duel.

It is revealed that the incident, as was at first suspected, had its origin in a quarrel over a woman. The two men concerned, Lai Chuen, aged 25, and Shiu Tze-shiu, aged 24, had for some time prior to the fatal quarrel, been on friendly terms. When off duty they appear to have frequently visited a floor in Yat Foo Street, in the western district, where lives a girl with whom both were acquainted and for whose favours they had been rivals.

The girl seems to have been partial to Lai Chuen, the man subsequently fatally shot, and this discrimination is alleged to have provoked resentment in the other.

INSULT ALLEGED.

Assigned to patrol duty on the same beat, the locality where lives the woman in the case, the shooting incident occurred when one was relieving the other at the hour of midnight (Saturday). They came face to face in the narrow street connecting Queen's Road West with Des Voeux Road West on the western side of No. 7 Police Station. At least three other district watchmen were eye-witnesses of the duel.

Shiu Tze-shiu, who was relieving Lai Chuen, is alleged to have offered an insult in an allusion to a visit Lai made earlier in the evening to the girl with whom both were acquainted; and following on this, a violent quarrel took place.

As the exchange of words progressed, both men were seen to finger their revolvers, and it would appear that a quick movement made by one of the men towards his holster was interpreted as a menacing gesture by the other, for there was an almost simultaneous the 25th on their way back to Germany. From the Philippines, the four, who arrived at Tokyo recently after a swift flight across the Pacific from Canada, are to proceed via the Dutch East Indies and India.

Though the Hongkong-Manila flight of about 650 miles is considered dangerous for a land plane of low power such as that in which Fernando Rein, young Spanish airman, flew to Aparri, it offers few terrors to such a craft as the Von Gronau ship.

draw of weapons, at the same time that one sought to restrain the other and dispossess him of the weapon.

BOTH ON GROUND.

A struggle took place and both men fell to the ground. Shiu Tze-shiu appears to have fallen first, and exchanged shots with his adversary from a prone position. He fired off the whole barrel of six shots. Four struck Lai Chuen, one wounding him in the arm and three entering his abdomen. They were fired at point-blank range. An examination of

INTERPORT BOWLS

H.K. TEAM'S GOOD IMPRESSION

PRACTICE GAMES YESTERDAY

(Our Own Correspondent).

Shanghai, Sept. 12.

The Hongkong interport lawn bowls team arrived yesterday afternoon, being met by the President and members of the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Association and taken to the Palace Hotel.

Later in the afternoon, the Hongkong bowlers paid a visit to the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Club, where they indulged in a practice roll-up.

Two rinks were formed for the practice game, and although the greens were in a very heavy state, it was seen that the Hongkong team is a very strong combination. The opinion is, indeed, expressed here that the visiting team is the strongest ever to have been sent to Shanghai.

To-day, the Hongkong players will meet the Lusitano Club in a rink game at Hongkew Park, at 3 p.m. They will later be entertained to dinner at the Lusitano Club.

his tunic revealed singed bullet holes.

Lai Chuen replied with three shots, two went wide, but the third struck Shiu Tze-shiu in the right upper arm, below the shoulder. The wound is not considered serious.

Despite his mortal injuries, Lai Chuen was able to stagger into the Police Station, followed by Shiu Tze-shiu. Before being removed to hospital, both accused the other of being the aggressor. Lai Chuen died at the Government Civil Hospital yesterday afternoon.

The matter is under investigation by Inspector Shaftain, in charge of the District Watchmen Force.
